50-YEAR "L" LEASE A SERIOUS PERIL TO BOSTON, SAYS BRANDEIS.

The proposition now submitted of reversing the established policy of Massachusetts and giving to the Elevated Company leases of the subways for a period of from forty-two to fifty years presents a serious peril to the welfare of the community.

No good reason can be advanced why the interests of the Boston Elevated Railway Company require now a long-term lease of the subway when long-term franchises were not necessary for the financing of surface street railway companies which it controls.

GRAFT JURY UNDER GUARD

EX-MAYOR CHARGES BUG GRAFT

Ex-Mayor Nathan Matthews, speaking before the House Ways and Means committee to-day for Governor Foss' recommendations concerning the suppression of gypsy moths in the State, charged that there is graft collusion between the State forester's department and the manufacturers of the arsenate of lead required for spraying the trees, whereby Boston is obliged to pay more for its arsenious lead than other cities and towns in the State.

He favored the Governor's recommendation that the State Forester's department be consolidated with the Fish and Game Commission under a single head, to have the supervision of the gypsy moth suppression work.

"If the Governor thinks he can bring about better results by the consolidation of these departments, I think the Legislature had better take him at his word and see what he can do," said Mr. Matthews. "As long as the work of the suppression of the moths is left in its present condition at least 75 per cent. of the money appropriated by the State for the work each year will be wasted.

Matthews Charges Collusion.

"There is collusion between the manufacturers of the arsenate of lead required for spraying and the State, whereby the towns now refuse to sell to the private citizen arsenious lead at cost as they did formerly. I know this to be true in Hamilton. Lead that they used to pay the town 5 cents for, they now have to pay 12 cents for, because the town won't sell them any. I ascertained from a Selectman no longer ago than last Saturday night that the State would not permit the towns to sell lead to citizens as they had been in the habit of doing. I have been informed that the same was true in Topsfield. It should be stopped by the Legislature.

"The State pays at the rate of seven to seven and one-half and sells to the town at eight cents. There has been discrimination against the city of Boston on price. I know that the State made a contract with a manufacturer by which Boston shall not get the benefit of the price, which, I believe, Rane, called Rane to explain, said that Boston had always made its own contract and bought its own lead. This year it came to the State and wanted to purchase fifty tons. The Commonwealth buys about 200 tons of the lead, sometimes more.

Rane Defends Department.

Mr. Rane said as Boston had always made its own price and contract he did not want to handicap the contract and, further, he did not wish to agree or furnish so large an amount of the lead. Before the question was fully settled Boston withdrew and made its own price. The State forester said that the department does not sell the arsenious lead to the towns, but furnishes them the lead itself direct.

The question being asked what price the State paid and what price Boston paid, Mr. Wortlder of the forestry department said the State's price on 200 tons is $4.50 per hundred weight, and he understood that Boston got it at $5.75 per hundred weight, using fifty tons.

Mr. Matthews closed by stating there should be no appropriation made this year for this work until the department has been completely reorganized. The hearing was then closed.

B. & M. DECIDES TO BUY LEASED ROAD

At a meeting of fifteen stockholders of the Boston & Maine railroad, held in the president's office at the North Station today, it was decided to purchase the rights and interests of the Worcester, Nashua & Rochester Railroad. For a long time the Boston & Maine has been buying up the shares of the road until it had acquired 23,514 shares out of 30,644. It was one of those leased by the Boston & Maine and President Mellen set to work to get it because of the economy in operating. The road is sixty-four miles long.

POLICE SEEK MAN WHO ABANDONS RIGS

The Brookline police are looking for a well-dressed man who has a mania for hiring teams at local liveries and then abandoning them. During the past two days this man, who gives the name of Mr. Drew, has called at three Brookline stables, hired turnouts and left the rigs several hours later at a street corner near the stable. The police believe the man has a mania for smart turnouts and has no money to pay for the hire.

"FIGHTING NINTH" CITIZENSHIP NEEDED

Father Gasson's Bugle Call to the People to Emulate the Courage and Patriotism of the Brave Irish Regiment Is a Message to Boston—Fall In, Citizens, and Fight the Fifty-Year Lease of Our Subways and Tunnels.

The mind of the public naturally reverts these days to that period in American history when the country was divided by civil strife and American citizenship and manhood were tested on the field of battle.

The semi-centennial anniversary of the "Fighting Ninth" of Massachusetts was observed fittingly in Boston last Sunday. Many of the brave boys of this notable regiment fell on the field where they fought. Many more have since answered the last bugle call. But a remnant of them heard on Sunday what Massachusetts and the whole country think of their courage and patriotism two generations after they were displayed.

Among the splendid tributes to this regiment was a brilliant sermon by the Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College. It was not only an eulogium on the "Fighting Ninth's" members, living and dead, but it was a call for FIGHTING CITIZENSHIP that is needed to-day just as much as it was fifty years ago.

The "Fighting Ninth" showed courage and patriotism at Malvern Hill, Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg and at other places. But there are scores of towns and cities in New England, and thousands of them in America, where just as much COURAGE, LOYALTY AND PATRIOTISM ARE NEEDED NOW to preserve the blessings that the fighting Boys in Blue bought with their suffering and lives.

Father Gasson's clear, mellifluous bugle call to the fearless, faithful, gallant Ninth was ALSO, AND MORE, for the ears of the GREAT ARMY OF SOLDIERS FOR THE COMMON GOOD who make up the fearless, faithful and gallant citizenship of our country.

Hear and heed what the eloquent priest said:

"Fall in, gallant Ninth, marshal all your forces against the hireling, manufacturers of Mammon, who treat labor as a bale of merchandise, who by their infamous exactions blanch the cheek of the foot-weary loom-tender and rob the child of the strength to which its limbs have a just claim.

"Fall in, fearless Ninth, marshal all your forces against the secret plottings and nefarious deeds of the anarchist, against those who proclaim that authority is a pest and governmental guidance a crime, and thus seek the ruin of our fair land.

"Fall in, faithful Ninth, marshal all your forces against the enemies of truth and of the most High, against those who would rob the child of its birthright, the wife of her support, the home of its sacred character, who would blot out the stars of hope from the firmament and turn the fair fields of earth into a valley of despair.

"Fall in, gallant Ninth, may all your efforts be directed toward making our citizens a nation of intelligent, fearless and God-loving people. May our land, under your fostering care, be ever the home of the strictest personal character, of the loftiest domestic ideals, of the noblest civic virtues, and a true leader of the nation in the ways of honor, honesty, justice, integrity, faith in God, hope in immortality and the conscientious obedience to law. This is true manhood, true valor, true patriotism.

"Fall in, gallant Ninth, be true to your mission of defending the country even to the end."

Just as the "Fighting Ninth" of Massachusetts and the other boys in other fighting regiments preserved the Union two generations ago for us of to-day, so the people of to-day should safeguard our institutions for the generations to come.

It were TREASON to do otherwise.

Boston faces a REAL PERIL RIGHT NOW in the proposed turning over of our underground streets—the subways and tunnels—to the Boston Elevated Railroad for their exclusive use for two generations to come.

To cope with it requires the courage of the Fighting Ninth, the fidelity of the Fighting Ninth and the patriotism of the Fighting Ninth in our best citizenship.

Fall in, LOYAL CITIZENS, AND PROTECT BOSTON'S INTERESTS.

RED SOX GAME IS CALLED OFF

The final game between the Red Sox and Tigers was called off by the Red Sox management this noon on account of the drizzling rain, and the Tigers were forced to leave Boston with an even break. The Cleveland Naps will make their appearance here to-morrow for the first of a five-game series.

WESTBURY, N. Y., June 13.—Because of wet grounds the exhibition polo game at the Meadowbrook field scheduled for this afternoon was officially called off at 10 o'clock.

KING WATCHES ASCOT RACES

LONDON, June 13.—Titled American women were cheered in the royal procession to the Ascot races to-day. Following the royal carriage in which King George and Queen Mary drove through the Mall came the Duchess of Roxburghe and the Countess Granard in separate carriages. Great crowds watched the procession as it passed in semi-state and cheered heartily, and especially for the American women.

Despite the uncertainty of the weather a record-breaking crowd went to Ascot, which is a society function of the season.

GRAFT JURY IS GUARDED

Fearing that some one may attempt to corrupt members of the jury in the Lawrence graft case, now on trial in the Superior Court at Salem, a detail of State detectives has been set to keep a careful watch over the members of the jury and prevent any outsider from approaching them.

It was learned to-day that there are twelve or more of these State detectives on guard. None of the members of the jury are suspected, but it is feared that powerful outside influences may be brought into play to influence the verdict of the twelve men.

None of the jurymen are from Lawrence. They are men gathered mostly from the southern section of the county and of unusually high standing. But the case has taken such a sensational turn, through the confession of Fred L. Snow, the Westford contractor, that the greatest vigilance is being displayed that justice may be done.

Admits Another Home.

Snow was recalled to the stand when the trial was resumed for cross-examination by former Senator James H. Vahey. Besides Snow those on trial are Patrick J. Lynch, superintendent of streets, Michael Flynn, a clerk in the street department offices, and Philip Holland, a contractor of Lawrence.

Vahey startled the court by an expose of Snow's private life right at the start. Vahey asked:

"Are you married?"

"Yes," replied Snow, "I was married in 1884."

"But don't you keep up another establishment?" persisted Vahey.

"Yes," admitted Snow, "I have a house at No. 223 School street, Lowell, in charge of Miss Laura Jones. I am there about three days in the week. I have a telephone there and do most of my business there."

Snow said that after he had received his first money from the City of Lawrence for padded paving stone bills he went to

LYNN DOCTOR FACES NEW LARCENY CHARGE

In the Lynn District Court to-day an additional charge of larceny in obtaining $36 worth of drugs from the E. L. Patch Co. of Boston by the use of Dr. James A. Keown's name was preferred against Dr. Edwin V. Bray, who was arrested yesterday by the use of forgery of Dr. Keown's name to a postal card by which he obtained 68 cents' worth of drugs from a Boston wholesale drug concern. He pleaded not guilty to both complaints, and was granted a continuance till next Friday. Edward B. Coughlin, Bray's attorney, told Judge Simmons criminal proceedings had been brought against his client simply to collect the money which Keown claims Bray owed him.

FATHER HARKINS AGAIN OPERATED ON

Rev. John J. Harkins of Lowell, for many years a curate at St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, to-day undergoes an operation at the Carney Hospital for an internal trouble. Fr. Harkins was operated on about a year ago for appendicitis. Last month he was obliged to go to the Carney Hospital for treatment. He left the institution a week ago, but his condition did not improve and he returned to the hospital. After a consultation of the surgeons to-day it was decided to perform an operation at once.

NEW ERUPTION BY VOLCANO DESTROYS HOMES OF FARMERS

MEXICO CITY, June 13.—The Colima volcano is again in eruption. Two new craters are apparently forming, while a new peak is rising on the west side of the mountain. Slight earthquakes still shake the region near by. The inhabitants are fleeing by hundreds.

Molten lava is running through the corn fields and destroying the homes of farm laborers on the slope.

MARION D. LUMBERT, WHO GOT LICENSE TO BE MANICURE

MANICURE GIRLS IN REBELLION

Dr. Francis H. Black, the new secretary of the Boston Board of Health, was a busy man to-day, meeting manicure girls, chiropodists, masseurs and others who were forced, under the new law to apply for licenses to do business. To-day was the last day for applications to be made by those doing business now.

The Board of Health maintains that the new law is to protect both the public and the legitimate practitioners from the operation of questionable places. But the unwilling applicants say it is a humiliation and a bother.

Applications for licenses have been coming in slowly since the board made announcement recently of the new law. But to-day they came in a rush. Up to to o'clock 120 applications had been received in all, out of a total of about 400 manicure, massage, chiropody and vapor-bath parlors in the city.

How the Law Reads.

Proprietors of parlors where one or more attendants are employed can apply for the entire establishment. But those running individual places, like a manicure girl in a barber shop, for instance, must apply individually.

The proprietors of the larger places say they do not see how the law is to benefit them. Among those who applied to-day for a license was Miss Frances of No. 7 Temple place. She had a fifteen-minute talk with Dr. Black. When she came out she said:

"I knew nothing of this license business until a few days ago. I don't know how it will work out. I think it is rather humiliating for one who is running a perfectly upright, honest and legitimate business to have to come down here and get out a license before one can carry on our work. Why, coming down here is like having to take out a dog license."

Back Bay Is Fussy.

"It looks as if everybody were suspicious. Every girl has to get at least two recommendations. It would be awfully hard for anyone entering by Back Bay people to get recommendations. The Back Bay people do not want their names used. I, with a long string of names in the world, however, for those manicures of the unfashionable parlors to get all the recommendations they want.

"So I ask, are we going to be benefited by this? It cannot help us any.

"I don't mind paying the dollar, but I dislike coming down to a board of Health office and submitting these questions as to my business and the girls I employ."

Dr. Black, several of the better class of manicure proprietors and chiropodists have gone out of business, notifying their customers they have closed their places rather than submit to being licensed.

Only one of the 120 who applied up to 10 o'clock to-day thirty are men. Some are proprietors of large manicure parlors. Other are chiropodists or run vapor bath or massage parlors. The rest are manicure girls.

Dr. Black, who comes here from Kansas, says he has felt that he had entered into a lively battle for many of the girls spoke their mind freely of the new law. The girls resent the law as a reflection on their character.

"VAGRANT" CLINGS TO A GOLD PIECE

SOUTHBRIDGE, June 13.—Alonzo L. Wetherell, who is sixty-four years old and for forty-nine years of that time has carried around a two-dollar gold piece, but has never been able to persuade himself that he should break it, was found guilty of vagrancy here and sentenced to two months in the workhouse.

50-YEAR LEASE A PERIL TO CITY, SAYS BRANDEIS

Louis D. Brandeis, recognized as one of the greatest railway and corporation authorities in America, in a statement issued today on the proposed fifty-year lease of the tunnels and subways of this city to the Boston Elevated Railroad, warns Boston that the proposal "presents a serious peril to the welfare of the community."

Mr. Brandeis points out that the arguments presented by the railroad for the long lease of the transportation facilities are the ones that were used in an attempt to get the Washington street subway in 1902; that they were unsound then and are unsound now.

The wise policy of this State, asserts Mr. Brandeis, to keep control of the local transportation situation, should not be reversed.

Mr. Brandeis's bugle blast to the people on this most important subject follows:

By LOUIS D. BRANDEIS.

The people of Massachusetts are again reminded that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Throughout the legislative sessions of 1900, 1901 and 1902 the proposed Washington street subway was the most prominent subject of discussion, and the precise question before the people was: Shall the people retain control of the transportation situation in Boston, or shall the control be surrendered for more than a generation to the Boston Elevated Railway Company?

How Doubts Were Removed in 1902

That question was decided in favor of the people in 1902. Whatever doubts had previously existed were removed by the famous veto of Senator Crane in which he approved of the views which had been advocated by the Associated Board of Trade and the Public Franchise League. The Legislature of 1902 limited the subway lease to twenty-five years, and the people had reason to believe that this question had been settled for all time, and that they would continue to retain control of the local transportation system by means of short- time leases of the subways.

The proposition now submitted of reversing the established policy of Massachusetts and giving to the Elevated company leases of the subways for a period of from forty-two to fifty years presents a serious peril to the welfare of the community.

Two reasons have been given for this extraordinary proposition:

First: That the Elevated company cannot properly finance its needs unless it has the assurance of a lease of the subways for so long a period.

Second: That the city's finances demand the assurance of a tenant until the bonds issued to pay for the subways shall have been paid off.

Both of these arguments were advanced ten years ago, and both of them were shown to be clearly unsound.

Rests on Misconception

The proposition that a long-term lease is required as an aid to financing the Elevated company rests upon an entire misconception of Massachusetts conditions. In no State in the Union has money been raised for street railways, gas and electric light companies on terms so favorable as in Massachusetts; and yet no surface street railway, gas or electric light company has ever been granted a long-term franchise in our streets. These companies have merely a license during good behavior to use the streets for their corporate purposes. This Massachusetts system of granting licenses to use streets, instead of giving vested rights or franchises to our public service corporations has proved a great protection both to the companies and to the public.

For the interminate licenses has secured from the corporation the good behavior which is the condition of the continuance of the license. The street using corporations of Massachusetts have been obliged to properly appreciate the good will of the public. They have not been tempted to arrogant action, such as has been common with corporations elsewhere, holding vested rights. On the other hand, the indeterminate license has secured proper treatment of the corporation; because the public has been put upon honor, and there is no instance of the people of Massachusetts having failed to treat public service corporations fairly.

Investors in the public service corporations of Massachusetts have shown their confidence in the Massachusetts system by investing year after year millions of dollars in our street railway, gas and electric light companies in reliance upon the fairness of the people of Massachusetts.

Good Will of People a Security

People are to-day purchasing common stock of the West End Street Railway Company on a basis which gives them a return of only 3¾ per cent. on

WIFE-MURDERER TELLS ALL DETAILS OF THE MAINE WOODS TRAGEDY

FARMINGTON, Me., June 13.—Marshall Taylor, self-confessed murderer of his wife, whose body was found by searchers in a shallow grave on his farm at Freeman after she had been mysteriously missing four weeks, was arraigned in the county court here to-day before Judge Holman.

Miss Gulda Searles, the young woman who became his housekeeper after the disappearance of his wife, has been examined of any part in the tragedy by the authorities and is held only as a witness.

Under the strain of continued questioning Taylor broke down and confessed. But in the amazing story he told to County Attorney C. M. Blanchard there was no trace of remorse. The woodsman and guide was eager to be free of the irritation and annoyance of repeated interrogations.

"Well," he began, "I killed her because she was always quarrelling with me. I had made all arrangements to get rid of her because the fighting was getting on my nerves.

"On the night of Friday, May 12, I asked her to go out in the woods at the rear of the house and hunt with me. She agreed and I took my shotgun. We walked across the clearing at the back of the house and after we got a little piece into the woods I asked her to go ahead of me through the trees.

"She stepped in front of me, and as soon as she did I held the gun close to the back of her head and fired. Her skull was shattered and she fell without a word. I fired only one shot and did not strike her after she fell.

"I set about to hide the body at once. Within a short distance from where she lay I dug a grave, dragged her body to it, put it at the bottom, piled stones over it and dirt over them and then cut some spruce boughs and spread them over the spot to conceal the fact that there had been digging there.

"This took some considerable time and when I got through I was tired out so I went home and slept. Next morning I wrote the letters and deeds to show my wife had committed suicide and had left all her property to me. I thought that would keep anyone from being suspicious of me.

Thought No One Would Suspect.

"Gulda Searles didn't know anything about it and she would not have known anything if they hadn't come and found the grave.

Taylor got calm as he progressed with his story. He went on later to amplify it with the details of their quarrels. They disagreed over money matters and also over men friends of Mrs. Taylor.

According to the husband, Mrs. Taylor had a three-year-old time ago to earn some money by playing for dances at a town nearby, and he gave her permission to do it. At first he accompanied her, although he did not dance, but by and by he ceased going with her. According to his story, she used to be escorted home by different men, and he objected to their coming into the house and sitting up until late at night.

He says when he remonstrated with her she told him that she wanted to do it. If she could not entertain company in her home and have the latitude that she wanted to keep her there she should be given a deed to the house. He made the transfer, he says, but does not know whether or not it was recorded. He says he knew it was filed one day when his wife went to Phillips Register. Later there was a quarrel when someone told her that the deed was invalid because Taylor's father's estate had not been settled and he had no right to deed the house to her.

The body of the slain woman was to be buried here to-day in the plot in which her first husband lies. It was taken yesterday to the town of Strong for the autopsy, and Dr. Selectman Freeman have provided a coffin and arrangements for the burial.

Explains About Housekeeper.

Taylor says Miss Searles came to his home as housekeeper almost three days after he had killed Mrs. Taylor.

That Taylor expected the woman to make her permanent home with him is also indicated to her seems evident from the fact that when she came to his house she brought with her a large crayon portrait of her brother, who is now serving a life sentence for wife murder, having been convicted three and a half years ago. This portrait occupies a conspicuous place in the sitting room of the Taylor house.

According to Taylor's story about a week before he killed his wife he told John Sebine, who was working for him, he would soon need a housekeeper because his wife was going away. Sebine recommended Miss Searles, who was then staying at his house, unable to do any hard work.

After he had killed his wife, he said, he asked Miss Searles to come and keep house for him. She said she would if it was all right, but she wanted to know, that he had a right to be a housekeeper, so he wrote to Lawyer Richards at Farmington, asking him the question and that gentleman wrote back that he had a right to have a housekeeper providing he could find one.

Her Story Differs Slightly.

"When did you write Mr. Richards?" he was asked.

"The day my woman went away."

After getting the letter from Mr. Richards, he took it to Salem and showed it to Gulda and she agreed to come to work for him, but she did not come that day. It was two or three days later that she came. On that day he took her to town and went to Salem to bring her belongings, trunk, pictures, etc., to the house, while she came on the train.

The Searles woman tells a somewhat different story from Taylor in regard to her becoming his housekeeper.

She says that some time before his wife disappeared, Taylor was at the Sebins house in Salem and told her his wife was going away and asked her if she would come and be his housekeeper.

"I told him," says the woman, "that if it was all right for him to have a housekeeper, I would come, but that he would have to find out if he had a right to have one. I wasn't well and I didn't want to get into any trouble."

She says that after his wife went away, Taylor again came after her to work as his housekeeper. She told him, by this date, though once she said it was the day Mrs. Taylor left, but she changed that. This time, as when he first mentioned it to her, she assured Taylor he must find out if he had a right to have a housekeeper.

$10,000 PRIZES IN REACH OF ALL

Ten thousand dollars in prizes to be won by a minimum of mental effort!

Isn't that worth thinking about and acting on?

It will be the most interesting diversion ever offered by a newspaper to its readers for the Summer months. And it will also be the most profitable and instructive.

Everyone is eligible, man, woman and child. But length of years is no assurance of winning the absorbing contest that will begin in next Sunday's AMERICAN with the publication of the first picture in the Proverb Competition.

The list of the awards is too long almost, to enumerate. There are one thousand of them, and everyone worth while winning. The capital prize is a $2,500 bungalow by the sea and among the other rewards are automobile runabouts, motor boats, handsome pianos, motor cycles and symphony graphophones.

Even without the hope of a prize thousands of persons would undoubtedly enter the contest because of the educational benefit to be derived from it, but the magnificent rewards offered for the slight effort of thinking out the puzzle pictures are sure to attract every reader of the AMERICAN.

An early start is an advantage. "Well begun is half done," says one of our familiar saws, and to follow the contest from beginning to end it is requisite to concentrated form the wisdom of ages.

There will be seventy-five of the puzzle pictures in consecutive issues of the daily and Sunday AMERICAN. Watch for them and enter the contest with the first opportunity next Sunday.

ROYALTY ADMIRES BOSTON SCENERY

ROME, June 13.—The first performance of Puccini's opera, "The Girl of the Golden West," was greeted last night at the Costanzi Theatre with great enthusiasm. The playhouse was crowded and each act met with an outburst of genuine applause. This was especially true of the second and third acts. Although it was admitted that the story possessed little dramatic element it was generally considered an American to suit Italian music. The scenery, which was lent by the Boston Opera Company, was greatly admired. The King and Queen were both interested spectators of the production and the house was crowded by the most prominent persons in Rome.

BUILDING "GONE," WANTS TAXES BACK

WORCESTER, June 13.—Henry M. Simoneau has put in a bill to the city for $19.68 for repayment of back taxes on a building which does not exist. Simoneau says he owned a cottage house at No. 20 Douglas street, which he converted into a three-decker in 1909. He was taxed after that on the three-decker which is, and on the cottage house which was. Assessors levied a tax on the veil and on the imaginary building for 1911. Simoneau has had the cottage tax removed and now seeks to recover two years' back taxes on it.

THREATEN LIFE OF THUG VICTIM

Following the conviction of two Italian hold-up men and their sentencing to terms of six to eight years in State prison, Fiorelli Ferdinando, a Maine lumberman, appeared at Cambridge police headquarters and asked permission to carry a revolver, stating that his life had been threatened since the conviction of the hold-up men.

Captain John F. Murray of the Central Square station, directed Ferdinando to Boston police headquarters, as the threats were made in Boston. After the verdict had been rendered and the men sentenced, Ferdinando went to an Italian lodging house in North square, where he spent the night. When he went into the square today he was surrounded by a number of Italians, all of whom muttered threats such as "That's the man who'll get him later." Badly frightened, Ferdinando jumped on a car and went to Cambridge.

On the night of May 29 Ferdinando was lured from a hotel by the North End hypnotized trio to Aberdeen avenue, Cambridge. Here he was given a terrific beating, credited with a murder and left for dead by the roadside. The men took his money, $40, and several small articles. Officers went to the boarding house at No. 139 Snelling street, Allston, and there arrested Angelo Lentine, Salvatore Meleleas and Charles Patranali. They were all identified by the June session of the Middlesex County grand jury on a charge of highway robbery. Yesterday Ferdinando stated to Assistant District Attorney Wise that he was not able to positively identify Lentine as one of the men who had robbed him, but that Meleleas and Patrine was quite pressed. The other two men were tried and convicted by the county supreme court and sentenced to 6 to 8 years each in Sing Sing Prison.

BIRCH FLY MAKES ITS ANNUAL VISIT

WHITINSVILLE, June 13.—The birch fly is in Whitinsville on its annual visit. It never appears anywhere else, so far as known. It might be called the perch fly, too, because perch bite at it ravenously. True fishermen dread its coming because men and boys who fish indiscriminately use the birch fly for bait and clean out the perch waters. Effort is made when the fly appears to keep it a secret, but the fly is here now and heavy catches of perch are being made. One catch of 300 perch was reported the other night. The fly stays a week.

WIFE ASKS PART OF $60 A WEEK TIPS

NEW YORK, June 13.—Mrs. Jennie Lauvernier, wife of Pierre Lauvernier, a waiter, has applied to Supreme Court Justice Cohalan for alimony pending the trial of her separation action. She alleges that her husband makes from $40 to $60 a week in tips. She says he will not average more than $12 a week. In addition he gets $20 a month for his services.

MORE MAINE SMALLPOX

SKOWHEGAN, Me., June 13.—A second case of smallpox has been discovered in a logging camp here, from which the quarantine on account of the first case was lifted Thursday. Forty-five foreigners were again placed under quarantine.

A Surprising Test

Take the best soap you can find, and wash your hair and scalp with it thoroughly.

Rinse the head well and wash out all the lather. Then wash your head immediately after with a shampoo made of neutral soap, cocoanut oil, glycerin, white of eggs and salicylic acid.

You will be astonished to see how much dust and dirt the ordinary soap left.

You will hardly believe your eyes.

Birt's Head Wash is made of the above ingredients. The discolored water remaining in the basin after using Birt's Head Wash will convince you better than anything else, and besides your hair will be soft and glossy.

You will never know the pleasure of possessing a perfectly clean scalp until you try Birt's Head Wash. In hygienic tubes 25c., at drug and department stores.

TWO DAYS LEFT IN BIG CONTEST

By The CONTEST EDITOR.

Two days left.

They are the last of the stretch. Candidates in the AMERICAN'S great $35,000 Prize Contest have only two days now before the contest comes to a close.

But a lot may be done in two days. Votes may be obtained. Subscriptions may be written. There is enough time to make a great difference in your individual standing in the contest.

But there is no time to fool away. If you know where there is a batch of votes or subscriptions get after them and get after them quick and hard.

When you have them, send them in quickly. Don't wait till the last bell rings.

The great $35,000 Prize Contest will close next Thursday, June 15, at 10 p. m. No subscriptions will be accepted after that hour except those mailed up to then, as shown by the postmark.

Candidates are hereby notified that all coupon votes printed in the AMERICAN on and after Thursday, June 8, will be valueless after Thursday, June 22. This gives contestants one week only after Contest closes in which to collect and turn in coupon votes.

BEAUTY SPECIALISTS PRAISE THIS SHAMPOO

"The best hair specialists no longer recommend soap for shampooing," writes Elsa Martyn in the Denver Call. "The alkali in soaps has been found to have a ruinous effect on the hair by destroying the lustre and color, causing dull, lifeless, streaky hair with bleached, split ends.

"In place of soap and prepared shampoos, experts on hair culture almost invariably recommend a very simple, inexpensive shampoo that is prepared by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. The abundant lather of this shampoo cleanses perfectly, removes all dust and dandruff, rinses easily and makes the hair dry very quickly.

"Canthrox destroys dandruff, stops itching of the scalp and leaves the hair lustrous, soft and very fluffy."

It isn't what you pay for advertising; it's what advertising pays you. Advertising that pays is the only kind of advertising; advertising that doesn't pay is dear at any price. Advertising in the AMERICAN pays best; therefore it is the cheapest.

POLICE GUARD GRAFT JURY

Europe. Valsey tried to find out who went with him, but couldn't.

"It is necessary to know," declared Valsey, "so that we may make a proper defense."

"It does not make any difference who went with him," remarked Judge Charles Hugh Bell.

Also Lives in Lowell.

The cross-examination of Snow follows:

Q.—Your name is Fred L. Snow? A.—Yes.

Q.—You are one of the defendants in this case? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where do you live, Mr. Snow? A.—In Westford.

Q.—Live any other place? A.—My home is in Westford.

Q.—Haven't you got another place—a place in Lowell? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where is that? A.—No. 223 School street.

Q.—There's a woman there, isn't there? A.—Well, yes.

Q.—Who is this woman? A.—Miss Laura Jones.

Q.—Do you occupy the whole house, you and Miss Jones? A.—No, we occupy one half of the house.

Q.—How often are you there? A.—Two or three days a week.

Q.—Anybody else there except you and Miss Jones? A.—No.

Q.—Have you got a telephone in the house there in your end of it? A.—Yes.

Q.—And this telephone is in the name of Miss Jones, is it not? A.—Yes.

Q.—But you can be reached there by telephone about any time? A.—Messages come to me over the phone.

Q.—And Holland knew that and knows the telephone number, didn't he? A.—I don't know. Q.—Now, when did you first meet Holland and Lyons? A.—It was in April of last year and in Lowell.

Q.—Where? A.—In the Central Hotel.

Q.—Who arranged for that meeting? A.—I was told by Mr. Jordal to be there and meet them.

Q.—And you received then your first order for paving blocks to be delivered in the city of Lawrence? A.—Yes.

No Hint of "Rake Off."

Q.—How many blocks were ordered? A.—Twenty thousand.

Q.—And who gave the order? A.—Lyons.

Q.—Was there anything said about the price of the blocks at that time? A.—Not a word.

Q.—Did Superintendent Lyons tell you at that time that he wanted a bonus or a rake off? A.—He did not.

Q.—Did Mr. Holland tell you that Lyons would expect a bonus or a rake off? A.—He did not.

Q.—Did Mr. Flynn at that time tell you that Lyons would expect a bonus or a rake off? A.—No.

Q.—So the transaction at that time was perfectly proper and an honest one? A.—Yes.

Q.—And when did you begin to deliver the blocks? A.—I began delivering about

Q.—Was there any price fixed? A.—No.

Q.—Who paid the freight? A.—I did.

Q.—Now when did you put your bills in to the city? A.—In June.

Tells of Graft Bill.

Q.—And just what were the circumstances? A.—I took my bill down to the street department offices in Lawrence and saw Mr. Flynn.

Q.—Why didn't you see Lyons? A.—Because superintendent Lyons was out in Q.—Well, go ahead and explain what you did with Flynn. A.—Flynn told me to charge the 20,000 blocks at $50 per thousand, and I made out the bill and left it with him.

Q.—When did you receive your money? A.—In July 12.

Q.—And you took all that money and put it in your pocket? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You know that $50 per thousand was too much for those blocks, didn't you? A.—I did.

Q.—Why did you make our your bill then for $50? A.—Because Flynn told me to.

Thought it was Honest.

Q.—Do you think that is honest? A.—Well, it was business.

Q.—Did you know when you went to the office that day just what you were to charge? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you know at any time prior to the making out of your bill in the office that day that you were going to charge the city an additional price? A.—I did not.

Q.—You sold blocks cheaper than that before, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you knew, as a matter of fact, when you made out that bill at $50, despite what Flynn said, that the transaction was a dishonest one? A.—Well, yes, but such things are done in honest men in business.

Q.—I didn't ask you what honest men did in business, but I want to ask you again, did you consider this an honest transaction? A.—I did.

Took Trip to Europe.

Q.—Did Flynn at that time tell you that Lyons expected a rakeoff? A.—He did not.

Q.—Did Lyons suggest to you even after you received your money that you should get a rakeoff? A.—He did not.

Q.—So up to that time, Lyons was perfectly honest in the transaction? A.—He was.

Q.—Now, you went away a little while after that didn't you? A.—I did.

Q.—Where did you go? A.—I went to Europe.

Q.—When did you go to Europe? A.—In August.

Q.—And when did you return? A.—I don't know exactly. I think on October 19.

Q.—Can you fix about the month of your return? A.—No.

Q.—Who went with you to Europe?

District-Attorney Atwill objected to this question.

Attorney Valsey argued that it was very material to have this question answered. He said that in providing for the defence counsel for the co-defendants desired to know the date of Mr. Snow's return from Europe, and that so long as he did not set exactly the date of his return the defence needed to know who went with him and when he returned so that the right person might be summoned for the defence.

Complaint by Lyons.

Judge Bell excluded the question and exceptions were taken by the defence.

Q.—Did anybody go to Europe and return with you? A.—Question excluded by Judge Bell and exception taken.

Q.—Where did you sell from on the other side? A.—Rotterdam.

Q.—And where did you arrive on this side? A.—In New York.

Q.—Did you stay over night in New York? A.—I did not. I came direct to Lowell.

Q.—And when did you begin to hear from Lyons or Holland or Flynn? A.—Right away.

Q.—Who saw you? A.—Phil Holland.

Q.—And what did he say to you? A.—He told me that I had been used by Lyons and that Lyons expected money.

Q.—And what did you do? A.—I told him I would fix Lyons right away.

Q.—And what did you do? A.—I drew $2,000 and gave it to Lyons.

Q.—Where did this transaction occur? A.—In the private office of the Street Department.

Says Lyons Took Money.

Q.—Did you have any talk with Lyons? A.—I simply told him that I would have fixed him up sooner if I hadn't gone to Europe.

Q.—What did Lyons say? A.—He simply said "That's all right."

Q.—And he took the money? A.—Yes, he took it.

Q.—Now, didn't you know that was a corrupt transaction with a city official? A.—I did.

Q.—And you went about it knowing it to be corrupt? A.—I did.

Q.—Why? A.—Because Holland told me to pay him and from the way things were I expected to get my money back.

Q.—Was that a factor for future orders? A.—No, it was for past favors.

Q.—But Lyons himself did not ask it? A.—No.

Got Larger Order.

Q.—Now, did you get any other orders from Lyons soon after this? A.—I got an order for 100,000 blocks.

Q.—And you made the delivery of those blocks? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you receive any orders meanwhile from Holland? A.—I did.

Q.—How many blocks did you supply Holland? A.—Over one million.

Q.—And how many paving blocks shipped? A.—They were shipped to Holland's siding near the Canobie Lake entrance.

Q.—Was anything ever said in order to ship paving blocks to the city did anybody tell you that Lyons expected a rakeoff? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did not Lyons say over the 'phone that he expected a rakeoff? A.—No.

Q.—He did not?

Q.—Did Flynn? A.—Not at that time.

Says Flynn Gave Order.

Q.—Who first spoke to you on the order of 100,000 blocks for the city A.—Holland.

Q.—Who gave you the order officially? A.—Mr. Flynn.

Q.—And also circumstances were? A.—I met Holland and Flynn at the meeting and Holland had Flynn come to me in his automobile up to the home of Superintendent Lyons. Lyons was not home so Flynn left an order for 100,000 blocks.

Q.—Was anything said about price? A.—Flynn said that it would be less than $50 a thousand.

Q.—When did you next meet Holland? A.—I drove down to a machine at the meeting and met him there.

Q.—You had plenty to drink, didn't you? A.—I did.

WHALE WINS IN RACE WITH SHIP

A whale did a marathon with the trains San Jose, in from Costa Rica and at the end of a two-mile race it was dead from heat, for the monster had kept nearly abreast of the steamer accounting with out trouble.

As soon as the steamer had got along side of the leviathan last Sunday the race started, for it seemed as though it was trying to see to what it could do. At first began to stir up the water on the starboard quarter then it dived under the vessel, reappearing on the port side. The passengers had lots of fun with it, or rather it with them. After an hour and more of the sport Mr. White gave an extra spurt and turned back. It was given a cheer for its good showing.

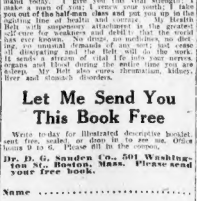
DANGER WARNING TO WOMEN OF CHICAGO

CHICAGO, June 13.—Conditions have become so bad in Chicago that Chief of Police McWeeny has ordered police escorts for women who are compelled to work or goes out at night without an escort is in a very bad way. If she does so without necessity the needs an escort to see that she gets home safely," said the chief today. "When a woman through necessity must be out in an emergency she must be protected. If they cannot get other escort and really have any business on the streets they should have their men folks home safely. Just let them call up the nearest police station."

ALL NURSES RESIGN.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 12.—The Brooklyn Eye and Ear Hospital is seeking an entirely new staff or nurses. The old staff resigned in a body as a protest against a rule recently posted, denying them the privilege of receiving telephone calls from their men friends.

NEW VITALITY



Vitality is the thing which gives men the courage to face all danger; it is the thing men do not have when they are afraid. Many a young man's career is cut short because he has been "run out of the half-mast class and put you up in the running class" by nervousness. Red cross Belt with suspensory attachment is the greatest self-cure for weakness ever known. It cures and has ever known. No drugs, no medicines, no doctoring, just natural demands of an easy, but useful dissipating and the Belt will do the work. It will send a glow of health and vitality to your organs and blood during the entire time you are wearing the Belt. Also cures rheumatism, kidney liver and stomach disorders.

ETHEL HERRICK, WHO IS TO MARRY T. J. PRINDIVILLE

MISS ETHEL HERRICK.

TAFT'S FORMER FIANCEE TO WED

Miss Ethel Herick of Boston and New York, whose engagement to Walbridge S. Taft, nephew of President Taft, was broken in January, 1910, will become the bride of Thomas J. Prindiville of Chicago on June 22. The marriage will be solemnized in the Lady Chapel of St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York city.

Miss Herrick is the daughter of the late Frederick C. Herrick of this city and a sister of Robert P. Herrick, the wealthy Milton clubman.

Mr. Prindiville, who succeeds Walbridge S. Taft in her affections, is one of Chicago's leading business men and prominent in society circles of that city.

There is extra interest in the announcement of Miss Herrick's coming marriage on account of the gossip prevalent when her engagement to Mr. Taft was broken.

Mr. Taft was a student at Harvard Law School. The first society knew of any trouble between him and Miss Herrick was when he was usher at the wedding of his sister, Miss Louise Taft, and Miss Herrick was not present. It was taken for granted that Miss Herrick would be one of the favored guests at this marriage of her fiance's sister.

Miss Louise Taft married a Mr. Snowden. The couple sailed on the Cedric soon after the wedding. Miss Herrick sailed with them. It was evident that there was no break between Miss Herrick and the Taft family in general.

But reports that the engagement between Miss Herrick and Mr. Taft was broken was confirmed by Mrs. Taft, who said:

"My son is no longer engaged to Miss Herrick. He is back in Milton. He did not come to New York to attend the sailing of Miss Herrick's and of Mrs. Louise Snowden. Why the engagement was broken I do not care to say."

Mrs. Taft was asked if the breaking of the engagement was due to attentions that Taft had shown another Boston girl and at which Miss Herrick had become piqued.

"I really cannot say," replied Mrs. Taft, "my son will have to speak for himself."

Mrs. Taft added, however, that Miss Herrick remained a warm friend of herself and her husband.

Later on young Taft denied that another girl was the cause of the ruptured engagement.

MARRIED ON TOP OF A HIGH MOUNTAIN

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 13.—Standing on the spot where their troth was plighted more than two years ago, and with the moon shining down upon them, Miss Eva H. Hunter and Bayles Guy Walker, both of Riverside, Cal., but formerly of New York, were married. Nearly 100 friends and relatives of the couple climbed up the hill to witness the ceremony. So steep was the grade that the priest who had been engaged to perform the ceremony lost his breath with the climb, and the wedding had to be delayed until he could speak.

MAN GOES MAD AT THOUGHT OF T. R.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 13.—The police found a man on Kentucky avenue to-day trotting about on all fours and roaring in imitation of a lion. He is raged in the city lockup, where he disports attired only in his birthday suit. His identity is a mystery. His first move when placed behind the bars was to rip every stitch of clothing from his back, tear it into strips and toss it into the corridor. He raves about being a lion and imagines Roosevelt is pursuing him.

FRICK PURCHASES TWO MASTERPIECES

PITTSBURG, June 13.—Two specimens of early English portraits, said by competent critics to be the best of their period ever brought to the United States, have been purchased at a cost of nearly $1,000,000 by Henry Clay Frick for his new home, No. 640 Fifth avenue, New York. One is the full length portrait of the Hon. Anne Duncombe, afterward Countess of Feversham, painted by Thomas Gainsborough. The other is the George Romney life size, full length portrait of Lady Milnes.

TEACHERS ASK NEW PETITION

The Boston elementary school teachers have issued a statement designed, they say, to correct the impression that they have been acting selfishly and from sinister motives in their activity in seeking legislation for an increase in salary.

The salary bill recently vetoed by Governor Foss comes up in the Senate to-day on a motion to reconsider the vote on which the veto was sustained.

After stating that the measure granting 20 cents to increase the pay of the 2,000 elementary school teachers "was held up in the executive chamber, pending the fulfilment of a suggestion that a 20-cent measure be introduced, the last 10 cents of which in 1914 should be used for the salaries of teachers whose regular maximum is now over $1,000," the teachers say:

"Why should the school committee now take up the cause of the teachers, whose claim for an increase in salary has never yet been made public, when they refused to petition the Legislature in behalf of the 2,000 elementary teachers whose grievance was of long standing?

"Why should not a separate petition covering these higher salaried teachers be presented to the Legislature in the usual way?

"We have advocated throughout the cause of the elementary teachers, including eight groups, primary, grammar, boys' school, training school, kindergarten, cooking, sewing and manual training teachers; in fact, two-thirds of the entire teaching staff of Boston.

"We have been supported by the higher paid women teachers. We object to the inversion of this movement for any other purpose than that for which it was intended."

AUTOS COLLIDE IN DORCHESTER

Two automobiles crashed at the junction of Blue Hill avenue and Walk Hill street, Dorchester, last night, but the occupants of both cars escaped serious injury. The machines were wrecked. The automobiles were numbered 1656 and 2494. According to this year's automobile directory, the former is owned by Charles E. Loud, a real estate dealer of No. 78 Beacon street. The owner of the other car is listed as Frank B. Comins of No. 186 Commonwealth avenue.

PROVIDENCE, June 13.—The Rhode Island textile industry will soon be substantially increased by the addition of new mills, one in Cranston and another in Pawtucket.

NERVOUSNESS

This Man Took His Wife's Advice and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and Was Cured.

Mr. Harry Bemis is a well-known resident of Pine street, Granville, N. Y. His complete recovery from nervousness through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should convince every sufferer of the value of this remedy.

"I had been feeling badly for a long time," says Mr. Bemis, "and finally was compelled to quit work on account of my ill health. I had been working hard and my trouble was at first extreme nervousness, then my sight became affected and I consulted an oculist who was also an M. D. He told me that I had, as he worded it, a shock of paralysis. He treated me for some time but received no benefit and so went to another physician. I can hardly describe how nervous I was at this time. Even slight noises would almost make me wild. My mouth was drawn so that I could scarcely eat and one eye was affected so I could hardly see. I had very little use of my limbs and was almost a complete wreck.

"The doctor failed to help me and I followed my wife's advice and took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She had used the same remedy herself with the most gratifying results and she pleaded me to try them when it appeared that the doctors were unable to help me.

"The pills acted very quickly in my case. I became less and less nervous and took the pills until I was entirely well. They worked wonders for me and I am glad to help others by telling of my cure."

There is absolutely no way of reaching the nerves with medicines except through the blood. The nerves receive all of their nourishment and support from the blood which, under healthful conditions, carries the nutrition needed to rebuild wasted nerve tissue.

Every person who is interested in the home treatment of nervousness or disorder should send for a new edition of our booklet entitled, "Diseases of the Nervous System, Their Nature, Symptoms and Treatment." Address the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain no harmful or habit-forming drugs and the sufferer who gives them a trial will avoid the danger so common in taking drugs which only deaden pain.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

QUICK RELIEF FROM TONSILITIS

The reason so many people are finding Dr. Teulon's Rubefacient so remarkably beneficial is because it quickly draws the inflammation from that part in the throat to the outside. The most painful and stubborn case will yield to the wonderful power of this celebrated remedy that was originated by Dr Teulon in Newton over forty years ago and used by him with remarkable success in all ailments of an inflammatory nature. Sold by all druggists, or sent anywhere on receipt of price. THE RUBEFACIENT CO., Newton Highlands, Mass.

AVIATORS REACH READVILLE PARK

The advance guard of the aviators arrived at Readville Park to-day and went to work at once placing the temporary hangers which are to house the Curtiss aeroplanes during the Boston aviation meet on Friday and Saturday of this week. E. D. Moore, manager for Mr. Curtis, came over from New York and the mechanicians and laborers came from Evansville, Ind., where the Curtiss flyers have been holding a meet.

"We have had no better park for the purpose in all the places that have held meets this Spring" said Mr. Moore. "We shall probably start the machines on the track itself, heading them toward the infield. In this way they can get up speed on the track and not run no danger of swooping towards the spectators as they leave the ground."

To-morrow morning Lincoln Beachey and Charles C. Witmer will arrive from Evansville. They are the aviators who have attracted so much attention in Washington and the South this Spring.

Glenn H. Curtiss is coming on from Hammondsport, N. Y., his home. He has been working with a hydro-aeroplane, teaching Lieutenant T. G. Ellyson of the United States navy to fly. The hydro-aeroplane rises from the surface of the water, across which it runs at sixty miles an hour on its dry pontoon. Mr. Curtiss has a passenger-carrying hydroplane, and has built a wharf into the lake for convenience in handling passengers. He brings his plane alongside the dock just as he would bring a motor boat.

Mr. Curtiss may bring the machine to Boston, if the park authorities will let him land on the beach reservation.

The most sensational race of the meet is to be the "three-story" race, or what Beachey calls the "Washington pie race." A racing automobile will go five miles on the track, with one aeroplane flying twenty-five feet overhead and another 100 feet high.

76 CATTLE BRING RECORD OF $27,925

WORCESTER, June 13.—Seventy-six head of cattle brought $27,925, or an average of a little more than $367 per the auction sale held at H. V. Prentice's Village Farm at Tatnuck. This is the best average price ever obtained for a herd of stock, except at the famous Cooper sale on Memorial Day, when a cow and a bull brought $21,500, the record price. The banner price was paid for Golden Maid, C. I. Hudson of East Norwich, N. Y., paid $2,000 for this cow.

DEFENCE OPENS IN TRIAL OF PLASS

The defence opened to-day in the United States Circuit Court, in the case against Rev. Norman Plass, Charles H. Brooks and John I. Traphagen, charged with using the mails in a scheme to defraud in connection with the Redeemable Investment Company. Attorney Fenner addressed the jury to-day, urging the good character he ascribed to the three defendants as proofs of their innocence.

Three Poses of Ethel Conrad, Girl in Stokes Case

RICH MEN WAR IN STOKES CASE

NEW YORK, June 13.—It is known to-day that at least one millionaire who declines to let his name become known is rushing to New York from the West to secure the release of Ethel Conrad, who, with Lillian Graham, is charged with attempting to murder W. E. D. Stokes. Both girls are under bail of $25,000.

Other wealthy men are also said to be willing to furnish funds to the two young women for their defence. James Farley, famous as a strike-breaker, who is a friend of Miss Conrad, may also appear in the case. He is rich.

At the arraignment of the two girls two new lawyers made their appearance in the case. These attorneys refused to tell from whom they expected to get their fees. That these lawyers, Robert M. Moore of No. 60 Wall street and Clarke L. Jordan of No. 154 Nassau street, have strong backing and are acting with authority was evident from the manner in which they ignored Herman Phillips during the court proceedings. When asked by whom they were engaged, the lawyers each made the same vague answer:

Mystery about Counsel.

"We were employed by Miss Graham and Miss Conrad."

Friends of the two fair prisoners are of the opinion that wealthy rival interests, all anxious to win the favor of the girls, have precipitated the present complication by employing separate lawyers. Just what the girls themselves think of the situation cannot be ascertained, as they talk to no one except the lawyers, and each lawyer declares that he is the one in authority.

In this connection it is interesting to know that Robert M. Moore has been counsel for "Jim" Farley. Miss Conrad was at Farley's country home near Plattsburg last September when she held up Charles Miller at the point of a revolver and made him retract alleged slanderous statements concerning her.

Assistant District Attorney O'Sullivan opened the proceedings, which were held before Magistrate Freschi in the West Fifty-fourth street court, by submitting a superseding affidavit to replace the earlier affidavit in the case. The new paper charged attempted murder, as had been charged before, and, reminded the statement of Patrolman Tully, the officer who made the arrests, as to how both girls admitted shooting at Stokes.

The proceedings were delayed some minutes at the suggestion of Magistrate Freschi until he could get definite news from the hospital as to Mr. Stokes's condition.

The two pretty girls were then led into court, clad in the same natty blue dresses, hats, gloves, patent leather slippers, etc., they had worn when taken to prison. Their black veils only half hid their faces. Miss Conrad was plainly nervous, but the older girl, Miss Graham, held her head erect. As soon as they came into view, however, both made a rush for their seats as fast as tight skirts would permit. Magistrate Freschi announced that he would fix bail at $25,000 and said he would hear motions for a reduction in the amount thereof as soon as Mr. Stokes's condition showed improvement. The hearing was adjourned until to-morrow morning and the girls were hurried to the Fifty-third street prison in a police ambulance. Mrs. Nagel, Miss Conrad's mother, although not in court, told Lawyer Phillips she is anxious to have her daughter's defence conducted separately from that to be made for Miss Graham. The younger girl's relatives stoutly maintain that she was led into her present difficulties by Miss Graham. They also assert Miss Conrad would probably never had known Mr. Stokes if she had not gone at the suggestion of Miss Graham on May 31 and asked the millionaire hotel proprietor to aid in getting her a position.

May Refuse Bail.

In spite of her mother's protests Miss Conrad, it is said, refuses to desert Miss Graham, and it was intimated last night that she might to-day refuse an offer of bail provided her companion is not equally fortunate.

Not the least interesting phase of the case is the disappearance of the letters which led to the shooting. Miss Graham insists that she locked the missives—twelve in all—in her trunk when she was taken by the police from the apartment Wednesday night last. She kept the key to the trunk in her possession until Saturday when it was given to Lawyer Moore for the purpose of getting the letters and placing them in a more secure place.

3 SWIM ASHORE OFF PRISON SHIP

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 13.—Three long-term prisoners confined aboard the prison ship Southery at the navy yard escaped early to-day by swimming a half-mile to shore in their night clothes after sawing the bars from their cell and jumping through a gun port.

It was the most daring escape at the yard since the prison ship has been stationed here.

The men are Leo Schultz of Medina, N. Y.; Charles A. Dennis, alias James C. Manning of Louisville, Ky., and Lafayette Warne of Mattewan, N. J., all serving long sentences for desertion. The men were present at roll call last night, but missing at roll call this morning.

An investigation started to-day involving the officer of the deck and several masters-at-arms.

The fire alarm in the yard was sounded as soon as the escape was discovered and marines were called out. The surrounding country was scoured for an hour but the men had a good start and no trace could be found.

The officers at the yard are aroused over the daring escape. At the time the men swam to the Kittery shore a fast tide was running and the water was very rough.

GREAT ROXBURY DAY SCHEDULE

At an enthusiastic meeting held last night in the Roxbury court house, with much spirited debate, the leaders in the different sections of Roxbury agreed that the Roxbury day celebration July 4 was the greatest project ever found to further the interest of the district. The speeches of Congressman James M. Curley and William T. A. Fitzgerald were greeted by cheers from the 300 representative men of the district.

The programme as arranged follows:

Banquet at Intervodonal Hall the night before. 9:30 a. m., July 4, parade, first section military, second section civic, concluding a festive section and an automobile section. The parade to assemble at the junction of Tremont street and Huntington avenue and march over the following route: Tremont street to Roxbury street, to Washington, to Warren, and Dudley to Blue Hill avenue, to Quincy street, thence by Warren and Walnut to the junction of Warren and Dudley streets. In the afternoon athletic carnivals in charge of John D. Regan, will be held on the Norfolk avenue, Merrella street and Columbus avenue playgrounds. Fireworks and band concerts in the evening.

The subject of clubs in the district paying money from the celebration fund occasioned a great deal of discussion and it was made clear by Mr. Hackett that all organizations in the district participating in the festive section of the parade would have to pay, owing to lack of funds, for their own costumes and floats and for the decoration of their clubhouses.

MORGAN BUYS QUEEN'S RELICS

LONDON, June 13.—J. Pierpont Morgan has become the possessor of Lord Ronald Gower's celebrated collection of Marie Antoinette relics, which are so numerous that only a full catalogue could do them justice.

Among the relics is the beautifully decorated fan which was the only piece of personal property left to the young Austrian Archduchess when she entered French territory to become married. At the frontier she exchanged her own apparel for the French clothing provided for her, but retained the fan.

Another relic is the alabaster bust of Marie Antoinette, which was one of the few things the Empress Eugenie took with her when she fled from the Tuileries and which Eugenie afterward gave to Lord Ronald. The gift was marked by a pecuniary incident. The ex-Empress accidentally knocked the bust off a table. It fell to the floor and the head was broken off as if severed by a knife. The ex-Empress exclaimed in horror: "Poor Queen! She never had a fair chance!"

A unique gold medal of Marie Antoinette and Louis XVI and a lock of the Queen's hair set in crystal are other relics in the collection.

Among many other books written by Lord Ronald Gower is "The Last Days of Marie Antoinette."

SUICIDE'S BOOK FOUND STRAIGHT

An investigation of the accounts of John Knights, No. 341 Tremont road, Waverly, a collector for the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, who committed suicide in the basement of the company's building, No. 39 Boylston street, shows that they are in perfect order.

No Trouble to Rid The Skin of Hairs
(Styles Pictured)
Science is greatly interested in a powder known to druggists as delatone, the discovery of which is due to Professor von Kahlden. When a little is mixed with water to form a paste and applied to the hairy surface for two or three minutes, then rubbed off, you will find the hairs are gone. This way of ridding the skin's surface of superfluous growths is fast gaining popularity because of the absence of pain.
Delatone is especially valuable because of its antiseptic qualities and for the reason that rarely is the second application necessary. While delatone costs a dollar an ounce, it is worth several times its cost to rid the skin of objectionable hairs.

MOTHER FAINTS AT COURT DECREE

Walter Dexter Milligan, six-year-old son of a former champion gunpointer of the United States Navy, was to-day given into the custody of his grandfather by Judge Loring in the Supreme Court. When the award was made Helen M. Milligan, the mother, frenzied and hysterical, broke from the court room with her child in her arms and sank to the floor of the corridor. Her screams penetrated the building, and she beat her head against the wall in an agony of grief.

"I want my boy. I want my baby," cried the pretty young woman. "They are taking my lifeblood." She collapsed and was carried to a bench where after a time she was revived, only to burst out again in a heartbreaking protest against the decree of the court.

The case came to the Supreme Court on the mother's appeal from the decision of the Probate Court of Essex County, by which the boy had been given to Thomas Milligin of Saugus, messenger in the Five Cents Savings Bank of Boston, in accordance with a letter written by the child's father before his death to the Judges of the Superior Court. Dexter Milligan died last March at his father's home. He had been divorced in the previous December and his child given into his custody by the court. Upon his death Mrs. Milligan, as the surviving parent, came into possession of the son.

The grandfather brought action to recover the boy on the ground that Mrs. Helen Milligan is not a fit person to have custody of him. The evidence that was presented at her divorce case was offered to prove this contention and Judge Loring sustained the contention. The Probate Court had decreed that Mrs. Milligan should be allowed to have the child Sundays from 9 o'clock until 6, but Judge Loring altered this provision. He declared that the youngster shall not be given into his mother's possession at all for a year and that she shall only be permitted to see him once a month at his grandfather's home. In the second year she shall take the boy once a month, from 9 to 6 on Sunday, and in the third year she may have him once a week.

During the court proceedings Walter Dexter Milligan sat in his mother's lap, playing with his cap and when she rushed to the corridor and collapsed he tried to comfort her. "Don't cry, mamma," he pleaded. "I will stay with you. Don't cry, mamma, dear." But his plaintive voice only provoked the woman to fresh paroxysms of weeping.

CITY HALL ANNEX COST $18,000 YEAR

Superintendent Fish of the Public Buildings Department estimates that it will cost about $2,000 to move the city departments quartered in the old county house building to the new quarters on Devonshire street. The total cost, including moving and housing until January 1, 1912, will be $18,810, which will also include the rent of a vault for the election department at a cost of $500. The city will pay at the rate of $18,000 a year for four floors in the erection of the new City Hall annex.

WINCHESTER'S MILE ROAD COSTS $250,000

A one-mile stretch of boulevard which the town of Winchester is to build, will cost more than $250,000, it is estimated. Thirty persons will be thrown out of work as a result and the ancient Whitney Mills, built in the Revolutionary period, will be destroyed.

The sum of $90,000 was appropriated at a special town meeting to-day for this property and bonds issued, payable in thirty years, to cover the expense.

ETHEL KIMBALL AGAIN IN COURT

Ethel M. Kimball, known also as Mrs. Ethel Wilson of No. 87 Foster street Brighton, who was brought to police headquarters in an automobile from Fernerofton and arrested in connection with an alleged forged check, was in the Brighton District Court to-day on a charge of evading a taxicab fare.

The complainant was John R. Bond, a negro chauffeur living at No. 25 Yarmouth street. The woman was accused of using his machine on a trip to Lynn and Revere Beach, the meter showing $4½ worth of mileage. Miss Kimball, or Mrs. Wilson, pleaded not guilty. A continuance was granted and the woman was held in $200.

Miss Kimball is twenty-seven years old and is an attractive brunette. The police say she gave them trouble in 1904 by passing checks on stable keepers. Harry K. Mansfield, proprietor of the Fernerofton, claims he cashed a check for her last Sunday.

Yesterday Miss Kimball had the Olds Motor Company demonstrate one of their cars to her on her statement that she intended to purchase a machine. Two women, with Miss Elizabeth Ryan of Jamaica Plain, a show girl, and two others, were carried to Fernerofton Inn. On their return, the party was given a surprise by the chauffeur, who landed them in Pemberton square. Miss Kimball was arrested after a tussle with Inspector Morris Wolf.

NAVY AIDS FALL RIVER FESTIVAL

FALL RIVER, June 13.—Local enthusiasm over the big cotton centennial anniversary celebration next week glowed brighter than ever today when it was announced that the battleship Connecticut, flagship of the North Atlantic squadron, had been detailed to escort President Taft on board the U. S. S. Mayflower from Newport to this city on Friday, June 23, which will be "President's Day" in the celebration program.

Great interest is being taken in the announcement that Glen Curtiss, the famous aviator, will be the star Saturday, June 24, "Aviation Day." Curtiss will give an exhibition over the Mt. Hope bay in his new hydro-aeroplane, and a race is likely to be arranged between his and the other well known aviator. Here is the condensed program for the week:

Monday, June 19, Manufacturers' Day; crowning of the Queen of the Carnival; opening of all the exhibitions.

Tuesday, Automobile Day, big auto parade in afternoon; fireworks display in evening.

Wednesday, Fall River Day; trades parade, afternoon.

Thursday, Merchants' Day; horse show in afternoon, carnival parade in evening.

Friday, President's Day; military and civic parade to be reviewed by President Taft; confetti carnival in evening.

Saturday, water carnival and aeroplane exhibitions on Mt. Hope bay.

CHARLESTOWN AWAITS 17TH

Not for years has the interest in Charlestown's great day—June 17—been as keen as that displayed for next Saturday's celebration which marks the 136th anniversary of the famous Bunker Hill battle.

The various committees which have the celebration in charge have been striving to make the program of entertainment one that will long be remembered, and there is every indication that their efforts will be more than successful.

The only dissension that has come to the front crept out in over the route of the morning parade. This will be the chief spectacular exhibition, revived again because of the general interest in the old-time spectacle and a feature that all of Charlestown is awaiting anxiously to see.

Chief Marshal McVarish and other members of the committee have mapped out a route for the parade which will end at Oak street. There is a loud demand for the continuation of the procession to Sullivan square, but thus far the efforts of those who have been seeking to have the parade touch this point have not been successful. It is contended that the business men of the Sullivan square section did not cooperate to the extent of contributing to the general fund for the day and for this reason the parade will not visit that section.

One Club Withdraws.

The Ellicott A. C. also want the parade to pass their headquarters, and when informed that the original route did not provide for this, they withdrew their feature, "The Women of 1925," from the horrible parade. Last night they had an indignation meeting, with the result that the matter will be put up to Mayor Fitzgerald for a final decision.

This is a mere matter of detail, however, which will not detract from the general success of the program arranged, no matter what the ultimate outcome.

Every club in the district is planning to have open house. The Bunker Hill Council, K. of C., will be hosts to hundreds in their beautiful quarters on the night before. The Hayes Square Outing Club, the Catholic Literary Union, the Jackson Club and all the political and social organizations are planning to welcome hundreds of their friends from without the district.

There is much interest in the baseball tournament, which has been arranged for the $50 prize offered by the committee and also the championship of Charlestown. The district has turned out some fine ball tossers and the best that the present generation can show will take part in the diamond stunts of next Saturday, the teams which are entered are the Jackson A. C., the Ellicott A. C., the Charlestown A. C. and the Warren A. C. The games will be played on the Sullivan square playground and will furnish excitement for the fans both morning and afternoon. Mayor Fitzgerald has promised to be present when the championship is decided.

Orators from Washington.

Councillor Daniel J. McDonald and Timothy J. Hickey have general charge of the arrangements and the expenditure of the city's appropriation, and their aim has been to see that no end of the district is forgotten in the program of entertainment that will be provided. It has been no easy task to cure for all the demands that have been made upon the limited amount that has been at their disposal, but with the generous contributions of the businessmen the details have been arranged so that everybody is satisfied.

Congressman William F. Murray is arranging to bring a distinguished array of oratorical talent from Washington for the Catholic Literary Union banquet which will open up the festivities on the night before.

The only thing that is now desired to make everything run smoothly is good weather. Forrester Smith prophesies a fair day and the committee are placing strong hopes in his prediction.

Already the decorations for the day are going up and before the last of the week every thoroughfare in the district will tell of the coming celebration through the display of bunting and the national colors.

Auto Notes

By J. C. KERRISON.

There seems to be rather an unfortunate combination of show dates in New York city for next year. The National Association of Automobile Manufacturers has announced the date of its show during the same week that the Automobile Board of Trade, which takes the place of the old Licensed Association, will hold its show.

It would seem to be rather an unfortunate selection of dates, for the later show would certainly have the call, owing to its former reputation, and the other show must necessarily suffer in comparison therewith.

It is the consensus of opinion that a serious mistake is being made in holding both the same week, and inasmuch as the Board of Trade first made the announcement as to its dates it would seem as though a change of dates on the part of the National Association would be advisable.

* * *

The committee having charge of the Spring outing of the Bay State Automobile Association on next Saturday is keenly alive to the necessity of making an attractive outing. It has done it in its power to make this one big event in the history of the club, and all that is now necessary is for the members to support the committee by going on the tip.

The place selected for the outing is one of the best on the North Shore, is fitted up in a comfortable and excellent manner, and the management has done everything in its power to carry out the fans and desires of the committee.

Over one hundred members and friends have already signified their intentions of participating in the outing, and it is hoped to have at least 150 that day. President Gilmore and Chairman Steven of the touring committee will see the weather is left undone that will in any way assist in making the outing pleasurable.

* * *

This week will see the start of the Garford pathfinder for the Cleveland News-Tiffee Day Reliability Run, as event that promises to be one of the largest of this season's runs, and the newspaper along the routes as well as the prospective entrants has already begun to plan for the event which will take place next month.

Leaving Cleveland one hundred miles "10" will blaze a trail to Wheeling, W. Va., thence to Columbus, O., and back to the starting point. The roads will be selected by Ira Fesche, who has probably traveled more miles over Ohio highways than any other motorist, and he will choose a course having scenic beauty as well as hills and hazards that will prove the worth of the contesting cars.

The selection of the pathfinding car was made by lot and the lucky number fell to the Elyria, O., firm. They will furnish one of their new Garford models for this work. On account of the number of entries which are already informally assured the towns and hamlets along the proposed route are planning to make the passing of tourists an event of some importance. For that reason they are waiting anxiously for the appearance of the pathfinder and the party will have local escorts over a large part of the way.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

The travelling public wants new subways to the South Station, Dorchester, South Boston, the West End and the Back Bay. These subways will cost, equipped, over $15,000,000, which is as much as the cost of the entire street railway system in metropolitan Boston 20 years ago.

The same passengers will be carried for the same nickel over a right of way costing $2,000,000 a mile instead of over a right of way costing $50,000 a mile.

It will be a great many years before there will be a sufficient increase in traffic to make the operation of these subways profitable. In the meantime much of the rental which the company is to pay under the pending bill—over $600,000 a year—will be a dead loss.

What ought a transportation company to do when there is a strong public demand for subways which cannot by any possibility show a profit until the far distant future?

Its management might say:

"We are furnishing what is said to be the best metropolitan transportation service in the world. We have large extensions under way. We do not want to be saddled with any more subways at present. We will not ask our stockholders to assume a sure present loss for the chance of a possible future profit."

But isn't it better for the management to say:

"We believe in Boston and its future. We will do our part in stimulating the growth of the city. We are willing to take a business risk on these subways on a business basis. We are willing to stand the present loss if we can be assured the use of the subways on terms fair to everybody, long enough to reap the benefits of future development."

Who is to say what are fair and business-like terms?

The last Legislature directed the State's own transportation experts—the three Railroad Commissioners and the five Transit Commissioners, sitting as a Joint Board, to answer.

The Joint Board reported to this Legislature that these new subways should be built; that the rental should be 4½% on their cost; that all subway leases should be made to run until 1936—25 years from now; and that either the City or the Company should then have the option of renewing the leases for not more than 25 years on terms to be fixed by arbitrators to be appointed by the Supreme Court. The Joint Board submitted to the Legislature a bill to this effect.

The provisions of the pending bill about length of leases are copied from the bill submitted by the Joint Board.

50-YEAR LEASE PERIL, SAYS BRANDEIS

WARNS BOSTON AGAINST ARGUMENTS OF ELEVATED FOR LONG-TERM AGREEMENT

the investment. They purchase the stock of the Edison Illuminating Company of Boston on a basis which gives them a return of a little over 4 per cent on its market value. This shows what good security the good will of the people of Massachusetts is. All the other street railway, gas and electric light companies are in substantially the same position.

By far the greater part of all the value which is represented by $129,000,000 of bonds and stocks of surface street railways of Massachusetts, and the many millions of dollars in the gas and electric light company securities of Massachusetts, is dependent upon this good will of the people.

For the licenses to lay tracks through our streets and roads, licenses to lay gas mains or electric light mains or to string wires through our streets and highways may be terminated at any time without making any compensation to the railroad companies if the public interests demand it.

No good reason can be advanced why the interests of the Boston Elevated Railway Company require new a long-term lease of the subway when long-term franchises were not necessary for the financing of surface street railway companies which it controls. Are the people of Massachusetts to be trusted less now than during the last fifty years?

Should Not Reverse Policy

The argument that the protection of the city demands a long-term lease of the subways is equally unsound. It is unconceivable that the city should not be able to secure at any time a tenant at a fair rental for its subway system. That system is essential to the life of the city. The West End Street Railway Company and the Boston & Northern Street Railway Company, who now use these subways in conjunction with the Boston Elevated Railway Company, would always be ready to put a fair rental, whether standing independently or consolidated. Indeed the very existence of these street railway systems rests upon their treating the public fairly.

The alleged danger of the city not getting a tenant for its subways is the very same argument which was pressed most vigorously by the Boston Elevated railway and its capitalistic allies at the time when the Washington Street Subway bill was pending. It is one of those bogies always put forward by the financiers when they are seeking to secure some vested right in the people's property. It is the argument of the pessimist or ultra conservative citizen who has no faith in his city, State and country. It will not frighten the people of Massachusetts who believes that the future will bring to them more of growth and prosperity than the Commonwealth has ever enjoyed in the past.

The established policy of Massachusetts of keeping control of the local transportation situation should not be reversed.

SENATE GIVES BILL ITS FIRST READING

The Boston Elevated omnibus bill was formally presented to the Senate at 1.30 today for its first reading on recommendation of the Joint Committee on Metropolitan Affairs and Street Railways. It was not at this presentation subject to debate, but to-morrow it will be printed in the Senate calendar and open for discussion on the question of ordering it to a third reading.

Indications that the bill will be the bone of contention in the bitterest fight that has occurred this year in the Legislature were not wanting to-day. The lobbyists of the Elevated were extremely busy with the members of the Senate and the members of the committee, trying to muster every available vote to their side.

Senator Charles H. Brown of Medford, one of the leaders in the fight to conserve the leases to the people, was equally busy with other members of the Legislature, and he was ably assisted by others who oppose the giving away of the privileges.

Talk of Referendum.

It was said that one of the measures that will be taken to block the attempt of the Elevated to acquire the 50-year leases will be the offering of a referendum to the Senate providing for a test at the polls at the next State election.

The activity of the Elevated lobby was evident in the attitude of many members of the Senate who were willing to discuss what they called the "glorious subway opportunity" presented to the people in the omnibus bill, but were loath to say anything about the payment of 7½ per cent dividends by the Elevated or of the tremendous value of 42 and 50-year leases granted to a corporation without adequate compensation.

It was plainly evident at the State House that every possible bit of pressure would be brought to bear by the interest involved to send the bill through the Senate, but opponents of the bill were confident that when forces are marshalled to-morrow it will be found that the Elevated squadrons will be found weak and that the measure will be so far denatured as to present little danger.

Finds Opposition Growing.

Mr. Murphy said that the opposition to the bill is growing in strength and numbers and that the debate will bring on a sharp fight. "There ought to be no chance for the Elevated to get this measure through," he declared, "and, despite its determined effort through the lobby and by every other means in its power to force the Legislature to grant what appears to be an inexcusable and indefensible privilege for a longer term of years than is consistent with public policy, I am confident that the Legislature will not take upon itself to pass such a bill without a referendum to the people. It is exactly for such a case as this that the referendum is fitted."

A report unfavorable to the Boston Elevated bill providing for a fifty-year lease of the subways and the fifty-year extension of the West End lease of the Elevated was prepared to-day for the directors of the Chamber of Commerce by its public utilities committee.

Louis D. Brandeis, for the Public Franchise League, gave out his statement attacking the fifty-year clause as harmful to the interests of the public. Several other organizations began a campaign to nullify the majority report in favor of the leases presented yesterday by the joint committee of the Legislature.

Secretary Kastman of the Public Franchise League declared to-day that he expected material aid in defeating the plan of the Elevated from Senator Tinkham, and that he regarded the split report of the committee as a strong indication that the House would reject the fifty-year lease clause.

Committee Split Over Bill.

Senator Bennett reported in the Senate yesterday for the joint committee on metropolitan affairs and street railroads the omnibus bill of the Boston Elevated Railway Company. It provides for a fifty-year extension of the West End lease, a Dorchester tunnel, a Boylston street subway, extension of the East Boston tunnel to Bowdoin square and extensions of the present subway and tunnel leases for a period ranging between forty-two and fifty years.

The committee stands eighteen for the bill, seven against and five reserving their rights. The lineup follows:

Yes—Senators Mulligan and Stearns and Representatives C. L. Carr, Cushing, Ryan, Newton and Connolly of the committee on metropolitan affairs; Senators Bennett, Curley, Hibbard and Keith and Representatives Hathaway of New Bedford, Crane, Kilpatrick, Hathaway of Dedham, Parks, Reidy and Breckenridge of the committee on street railways.

No—Senators Brown and Murray and Representatives Bothfeld and Parker of the committee on metropolitan affairs, and Representatives Ellis, Hardy and Heinberg of the committee on street railways.

Reserving their rights—Representatives Lomasney, Thomas, Nickerson and Rideout of the committee on metropolitan affairs, and Representative Daly of the committee on street railways.

MRS. BULL'S BROTHER ATTACKED BY LAWYER FOR WILL CONTESTANT

ALFRED, Me., June 13.—Sherman L. Whipple, counsel for Mrs. Olin Bull of Vaughan, who is contesting the will of her mother, Mrs. Ole Bull, continued to dig into the story of the handling of $125,000 in funds of the late estate by Joseph G. Thorp, brother of Mrs. Bull and executor of the will, when the will trial was resumed to-day.

Mr. Thorp, resented yesterday Mr. Whipple's line of questions regarding the transfer of $125,000 worth of securities to Jackson & Curtis, Boston brokers.

To-day Mr. Whipple had Mr. Thorp on the stand again. When Mr. Whipple started to grill Mr. Thorp on this same point Judge Hobbs, who is hearing the case, interrupted, saying:

"So far as I can see, Mr. Whipple, this line of inquiry is foreign to the main issue of the case. Will you please explain its bearing?"

Calls Thorp a Dictator.

"I wish to show," said Mr. Whipple, "how Thorp dominated his sister's property in her lifetime. I wish also to throw some light upon Mr. Thorp's conduct. This court is concerned with the appointment of certain persons as executors, and their conduct is pertinent."

"From an examination of his conduct we may judge what conditions were before Mrs. Bull's death. The question comes up as to whether he behaved properly. In an earlier days evasion of taxes was not considered especially reprehensible, but in modern times there is a certain stress laid upon public duty to share the public burden. When one departs from the straight line of upright conduct and conceals or evades, his conduct is open to inference.

"If after the testator's death hatred and antipathy towards the sole heir is shown, you can deduce a certain hatred and antipathy during the testator's lifetime. On the other hand, suppose a person behaves as you would expect the next of kin to act, that also should be brought out."

The judge said he may proceed.

Mr. Whipple's questioning was directed to the reason advanced by Mr. Thorp last night for the transfer of these securities. Mr. Thorp said last night that it was done so that legacies might be paid promptly, and if these securities were transferred so as to be easily accessible.

Ignorant of the Will.

Q.—Did you except the $200,000 in Rhode Island which would be tied up by inheritance taxes for two years? A.—No.

Q.—Did you know the provisions of the will at this time? A.—No.

Q.—Did you expect the legacies to amount to more than $500,000? A.—No.

Q.—When you are asked now why you transferred these certificates out of your sister's name, you don't recall any reason for doing it, but can only infer that they were transferred to be available for legacies? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did your counsel advise you to make this transfer? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then shifting the burden to Mr. Parker you will say that this transfer was made on his advice? A.—It was made on his advice.

Mr. Whipple then read the description of some of the certificates of stock which were transferred. It was found in some cases that some of the shares had not been re-transferred back until last February. Most of the shares were transferred back by Jackson and Curtis in blank and bore the pencil initials "J. G. T."

Value Is Not Given.

The certificates were for the most part in Massachusetts property and included a great many realty trust companies. No estimate was given of their value.

Tilt Between Attorneys.

"Your honor, I understand that counsel for the will have not yet filed a proper petition, as we agreed last week. I understand the petition was to have been filed, but I have learned through the press that Mr. Cobb does not expect to file a petition."

"We never had any idea of filing a new petition," said Attorney Cobb. "The present petition is sufficient."

"I cannot agree to that," said Mr. Whipple. "I have a very distinct apprehension as to the competency of the petition in the present state of affairs."

Judge Hobbs then made this statement:

"I had understood that the case would proceed on the present basis, overlooking any informalities that appear on the surface. Inasmuch as you say there may be a misunderstanding as to proceeding with the hearing of this case, I think the case for ought to be settled between the attorneys and I will therefore suspend for fifteen minutes to allow counsel to confer."

Court then suspended, while counsel for the will and contestants conferred.

CRANBERRY WORKER IS KILLED BY TRAIN

MIDDLEBORO, June 13.—Manuel Barros, who worked in a cranberry bog in Rock village, stepped in front of the Cape express at South Middleboro to-day and was instantly killed. The engineer did not know of the accident until he had reached Buzzard's Bay. Barros approached the railroad crossing when William G. LeBaron, the crossing tender, grabbed him. The two men struggled. Barros got free and walked toward the train. He had been in ill-health, and the police think he was despondent and committed suicide.

PASTORS ASSIGNED BY BISHOP WALTERS

NEW HAVEN, June 12.—At the New England section of the M. E. Zion church assignments of pastors by Bishop Walters included the following: Columbus Avenue Church, Boston, Rev. G. W. Johnson; Worcester, Dr. George Biddle; Cambridge, Rev. U. Fairfax; Attleboro, Rev. G. F. Green; Great Barrington, Rev. S. H. Johnson; Amherst, Rev. William Frank lin; Lowell, Rev. C. A. Grodney; Salem, Rev. W. R. Ferris.

PANIC AT SECOND BOMB OF PLOTTERS

NEW YORK, June 13.—New York's "wickedest block" was again shaken by a bomb to-day, when an attempt was made to blow up the grocery store of Frank Zilbello on the ground floor of the five-story apartment house at No. 338 Elizabeth street. The actual damage was trifling, but panic reigned among the tenants, who stampeded to the street. An attempt was made to dynamite Zilbello's place Sunday night, after blackmail demands.

HOUSE PASSES BILL ON ELECTRIFICATION

The bill providing for the electrification of all railroads within a radius of ten miles from Boston was passed by the House today to be engrossed. It now goes to the Senate. The measure directs that all railroads shall submit plans and specifications for the electrification of their systems to the railroad commission by September 12, 1912, and that upon the acceptance of these plans by the commission installation shall be ordered immediately.

Grows Five Inches of New Hair in Thirty Days.

Both men and women, inclined to baldness or dandruff, will be interested in the following simple home formula for hair and scalp treatment, strongly recommended by a reader who states that from its use, in thirty days, she grew new hair five inches long.

Bay Rum	6 oz.
Lavona de Composee	2 oz.
Menthol Crystals	½ dr.

These ingredients are all staple, standard and inexpensive pharmaceutical products kept by any well equipped druggist. Let the druggist mix them for you or you can do it yourself at home. Allow to stand half an hour before using. Apply night and morning, rubbing briskly into the scalp with the finger tips or a medium stiff brush.

This preparation is not only a wonderfully rapid hair grower, but it quickly stops dandruff, falling hair and itching scalp and although it is neither a stain or dye, will restore natural color to gray, streaked or faded hair in nine cases out of ten.

Be careful not to apply where hair is not desired.

New Bronze Doors at Wellesley

Miss Alice F. Pendleton, the new president of Wellesley, will preside at the unveiling of the bronze doors, which will be presented to the college library by the class of 1886, on Saturday afternoon. Not only is this one of the new president's first official ceremonies, but it is her own class which is presenting the doors, on the occasion of their twenty-fifth reunion. The doors are a memorial of Professor Eben Norton Horsford of Harvard, who was an honorary member of the class. The two panels, with the bronze transom over them, measure six by thirteen feet. They are designed by Miss Evelyn Beatrice Longman of New York city, a student and protege of Daniel French, the artist who designed the Alice Freeman Palmer memorial in the College Chapel.

Is the two main panels are full size figures of a man and a woman, representing "Wisdom" and "Charity." Clinging to the woman's skirts is a little child, which suggests perhaps the additional thought of instinctive mother love.

Above the transom runs a ribbon bearing the college motto, "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister," and below it, in wreath of daisies, the class flower, are ten class numerals, and the Greek initials of the class. Encircling the entire design is a conventionalized frame of oak leaves for the many oak trees upon the college campus, and bracelets, which were Professor Horsford's favorite flower. The designs in the small panels at the top of the doors are Greek urns, in which burns the flame of knowledge, encircled by the serpent of wisdom.

MELLEN IN STAR CHAMBER TALK

Charles S. Mellen and Timothy E. Byrnes, president and vice-president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford and Boston & Maine Railroads, went before the sub-committees of the legislative committees on Railroads and Metropolitan Affairs in the chamber of commerce to-day to tell why their roads wish to acquire the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn line, and how they propose to do it. The Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn is Melvin O. Adams's road, commonly known as the Narrow Gauge.

Senate Chairman Blanchard of railroads and Senate Chairman Mulligan of metropolitan affairs presided jointly at the hearing.

The sub-committees met at 10.30. The two railroad men came in at 10.45, quietly and with few about the State House knowing about it.

It was expected that Mr. Mellen would do most of the talking. Among the tasks he had set out to try to smooth out the wrinkles caused by Melvin O. Adams's recent statement before the same sub-committees that it was not sure that he wished his road to be acquired" by the Boston & Maine and the New Haven.

Acquisition of the Narrow Gauge is part of Mr. Mellen's New Haven transportation development plans. He desires to extend the New England Lynn and to have it enter Boston via a harbor tunnel from East Boston, terminating at the South Station.

WILL WRESTLE FOR NEW ENGLAND TITLE

The fans have enjoyed the weekly wrestling matches at the Columbia to such an extent that Manager Farren has decided to put on two big matches this week that are bound to tickle the palates of the sports. Cyclone Burns, who defeated Orpheus last week, will go to a finish with Strangler Lewis, and the battle promises to be even more thrilling than its predecessor, and that will be going some.

Then those old rivals, Sam Anderson of Norwood and Jim Peoples, "The Terrible Greek," will wrestle for a hands free championship of New England, and those who saw them go an hour without a fall last Friday night will have a chance to see settled the much discussed question as to which is the better man. The champion's belt that goes to the winner will be on exhibition in the window of a Washington street firm all the week.

BIKE RACERS IN ONE HOUR GRIND

The first four-cornered motor pace of the year is down on the program for the holiday meeting of the Revere cycle track, Saturday, June 17. This race will be the first one-hour motor pace event held at the Revere cycle track for some time. The four men who come together in the hour race are Elmer Collins, George Wiley, Eddie Root and Ray Duer, the California pace follower.

This will be the first appearance of Duer in the East. He was to have competed against Collins and Lawrence at the Revere cycle track last week, but owing to the rain the race was called off.

He is said to be a wonder at the pace game. The long-distance grind is just to his liking, and with Collins in the proper shape, the hour race is bound to be a beaut, and it would not be surprising to those who have followed the work of the Coast boy if a new record for the hour was established.

The Class B riders will make their debut of the season in two special races, which have been arranged for them by the management of the track. Two amateur events will also be carded, and a novice event will bring the meet to a close.

RIVALS BATTLE FOR MIXER CUP

SCORES OF PREVIOUS GAMES.

Limits, 7...1908...Wide Awakes, 5
Limits, 4...1909...Wide Awakes, 6
Limits, 4...1910...Wide Awakes, 6

Somerville is going right out to rival Charlestown on the 17th and if the members of the Limits and Wide Awakes baseball teams have their way the former city will have the real and only celebration.

The big event of the day centres around a game between these old-time rivals for the J. Frank Ayer cup.

Some people, leading Somerville citizens declare, have an idea that Charlestown is the only place which has a license to celebrate the 17th in fitting style. Some others have a hunch that the Red Sox and the Braves are the only two baseball teams that known how to play ball, but several hundred larger rooters stubbornly hold that the afore mentioned people are all wrong. They say that Somerville has as much right to celebrate the 17th as Charlestown, for does it not border on the sacred hallowbounds of being the home of the Bunker Hill monument?

For the past three years the Limits and the Wide Awakes have met in an annual contest. The Wide Awake team is made up of the handsomest single men in Somerville, but that doesn't prevent them from being good ball players.

The Limit nine is composed of all married men, and they intend to show the youngsters what's what on Broadway field next Saturday.

The Wide Awakes have been victors the past two years by the score of 4 to 1, in 1908 the Limits won by the score of 7 to 5, and they hope to repeat this year.

The Wide Awake line-up includes Fred McKeown, Carl Richardson, Ralph Quimby, Albert Vincent, E. L. Littlefield and Arthur Tedder, while the Limits boast of such stars as George Handlon, Arthur Mills, Karl Parker, E. Colby, Parker, Fred Howard and Elbridge Lavender. Charlie Page is the able manager of the Limits.

Mayor Charles A. Burns has agreed to start the game.

HAPPY NEWSBOYS IN TITLE BALL GAME

Manager Happy of the Happy Newsboys' baseball team, has made arrangements with Dave Boland of Worcester to go to the heart of the Commonwealth and engage in combat with Dave's charges.

Mr. Boland is the AMERICAN agent in Worcester, and when a crowd of AMERICAN hustlers saw that Happy's bunch claimed the newsboy championship of the State, they got after Dave to arrange a game.

The Worcester newsies kept after him so much that he made a special trip to Boston and met Happy and after a little argument the game contract was arranged.

The Worcester boys claim that they can sell more papers than the Boston youngsters, but Happy claims that his selling record, as well as the diamond title, and will put both at stake, for the winner of the ball game to take both.

A large crowd of Boston's newsboys will go with the team, and the Bostonians all claim they want to be on hand to see the massacre.

GALLANT LOSES ON FOUL TO BAY WOOD

FALL RIVER, June 13.—Johnny Gallant of Boston was disqualified after the bell had sounded at the finish of the eleventh round in the 12-round bout against Bay Wood of this city. Just as the bell sounded Wood, who had been fighting hard, struck Gallant a light blow in the face. Gallant, who was virtually on his way to his corner, turned and struck Wood a slap on the back. Referee Cote immediately gave the fight to Wood on the ground that Gallant had committed a foul by striking Wood. The fight had been a fierce one, with Wood leading on points. He did practically all the leading, Gallant's style of fighting being more of a stall, especially from the third round to the tenth. In the tenth and eleventh Gallant had the better of the fighting, which was terrific. Gallant opening an old cut over Wood's left eye.

MOORE EXPECTS TO BEAT WELLS

Matt Wells, the English lightweight champion who boxes Pal Moore of Philadelphia at the Armory A. A. to-night, arrived in this city from Stratford, Ct., today. Wells says he is in as good shape as when he defeated Freddie Welsh for the English title and the Lord Lonsdale belt.

He does not have much to say, but is supremely confident of the result. He remarked that he hoped Pal Moore would mix things with him, as he figures that if he will he will be returned the winner long before the limit of the bout, which is twelve rounds.

Pal Moore arrived in town from Allentown, N. J., where he has been training, this morning. Jimmy DeForest, his manager, has written to close friends that Moore will spring a surprise on the English champion. With both boxers in such a condition as good as to be reported, there is bound to be some boxing of the scientific order.

The preliminaries are above the average, Johnny Connolly of Scotland makes his first professional appearance in a six-round bout with Jack Flynn of Lynn. Frankie Mack of Beachmont will try to outpoint Eddie Reagan, a rugged boxer who hails from Quincy. The semi-final between Cliff Cote of Biddeford, Me., and Jimmy Quinlan of Danvers is bound to be a rugged bout while it lasts.

Jack White of New York has been selected the judge of the contest. Members are requested to secure their reservations before 4 p. m., as no seats will be sold after that time.

WESTFIELD HAS GOOD BOXING CARNIVAL

WESTFIELD, June 13.—Danny Moriarty of Holyoke defeated Benny Ford of New Haven in the fourth round of what was scheduled to be a six-round bout at the meeting of the Whip City A. C. Moriarty was the aggressor throughout. In the initial round, the Holyoke fighter had Ford going and continued his lead throughout. In the last round, Moriarty had Ford on the defensive when referee Crowley called off the bout on account of the cheering of the crowd. In the preliminaries, Chick West of Holyoke knocked out Billy Aylward of this town in the fourth round of a four-round bout. Kid Sica of New Haven outpointed Young Roesch of Adams in a six-round bout and Young McDonough of Manchester, N. H., outclassed Dodo Mahar of New Haven in a six-round bout.

Horse Notes

Narragansett Park is a possibility as a member of the New England half-mile track circuit.

Simon Kenton (2.10½), of Readville Handicap fame, has worked the half-mile track in 2.12⅘ for Norman Tallman.

Walter Cox will open his Grand Circuit campaign at Kalamazoo, and judging by the reports from Granite State Park the horses in his stable will be ready.

Entries for the $500 free-for-all pace to be given in connection with the Rockingham Fair, September 22-23, close June 15. The management are determined that the fair for which we shall be a record breaker and rank with the best in the country.

George G. Hall of the Adams House has sold to George H. Hicks, of Winchester, the fast trotting mare Lucy Gano, by Nelson's Wilkes. Trainer Bob Lundy had the mare at the Readville track for awhile last season and she showed that she is a sure enough trotter.

Fred Bellows' pacer Caffeens (2.07¾), is fast rounding into form and will be ready to go out for the money in the free-for-all pacing events over the half-mile tracks when the ball rings. Bellows' other well-bred pacer will surprise some of those whose pacers carry a whole lot of rigging before the pumpkin shows are over.

The mare that George Leavitt recently purchased in Kentucky was not Chorine (2.13½), but Cleone Black, a four-year-old daughter of Chorine by Gambetta Wilkes (2.04½). Chorine Black has a colt by Cecilian Boy (2.04½), and is supposed to be in foal by General Watts (2.06¾).

Chino has been given a record in 2.13¾. He will be ready for a further reduction in the trotting record when the time comes.

The pacer Ess H. Kay (2.02¼) was the first of the horses in Ed. Geers's stable to cross the 2.10 line in his work at the Minneapolis track this season.

Lady Green Goods has been a mile in 2.08½ for trainer Bob Grady. She makes the four-year-old daughter of Peter the Great look pretty good for the M. and M.

DRISCOLL AFTER FANNING RECORD

By RILEY.

Ever hear of North Abington?

Oh yes. I've read about a great schoolboy pitcher that performs for he his school of that town.

That's right, that's the town where Mike Driscoll comes from. Mike is a swifter and he has gone the rounds of baseball map. Crossett's and Arnold's best making establishments are located in that town but what difference des it make, baseball is the noblest thing on earth and a good ballplayer can put a town the map much quicker than a lot of other things put down to the point. Right High school has a good baseball team but their success lies in the hands of Mike Driscoll. Mike has been holdin down the job of flinging for a couple of seasons but this year he has been in the height of glory. Last week he pitched four games in four days and I reckon I helped out his already large number of strikeout victims of the big league school. Fanning batters is Mike's hobby and it does not know when he has indulged enough in his favorite pastime. In his last seven games he has mused 105 batters and that is going at a few. The teams he has been stakin up against are not weaklings, but the leagues in Plymouth County and that's saying a lot. Middleboro, Whitman, Rockland, Weymouth, Rockland and he Oliver Ames school aspire are dinglin from his belt.

In several of the games his team was little out of condition for he was worked couple times a week, bewith a few days rest he goes in and a make the ball talk. His favorite is the fadeaway ball that makes the helest batters look foolish. Driscoll strouhs strike early in the season when he stand himself, alder with eight other men, against the Oliver Ames school down in orth Easton. He fanned seventeen men that game and from that time on hess found his victims easy and many a made seventeen batters of the Straight train bite at his assortment of shoots, urteen fanned in the Roxbury game, fourte victims in the innings he pitched ainst Weymouth High and he has add many strikeouts to his records in the me against Rockland and Whitman. But the games he played he was fod to work at his tip top form for his hole outfield and one of the best infiers at the schools were down in studi The men umbrian are the heaviest ters and Mike relies on them to get runs while he stopped the runs of t opponents.

NEW STEEL BALL PARK IN BOSTON

President Ben Johnson of the American league, returned from his trip to the Cape yesterday. He spent several hours with President John I. Taylor looking over the complete plan of the baseball plant to be completed next Spring for the Red Sox. He had an audience later with Umpire Evans and went to the American grounds in the afternoon.

The evening was spent with friends at the Algonquin club, and the midnight train took him to New York. President Johnson will return to attend the banquet at the Algonquin club to-morrow night and will leave for Chicago Thursday morning.

Speaking of the baseball plants of the American League, President Johnson said: "You will see one of the finest in Boston next season. I have looked over the plans and consider them perfect and the location in the Back Bay district is ideal.

"We have now five steel plants in the American League and will have eight by next season. The new park for the New York Highlanders will accommodate 20,000 people.

FINAL GAME IN PREP LEAGUE

The high school baseball rooters are saving up all their energy for to-morrow afternoon, so that they may spend it all in their rooting at the big game of the Prep League series, which is to be played at the National League grounds between the Newton and Brookline High School teams.

These two nines are in a tie for the league championship and to-morrow they meet, and to the winner goes the championship of the three-cornered Prep League.

These schools have each defeated Cambridge Latin twice and in turn have defeated each other once. Three weeks ago Newton took the measure of Brookline High by a close score, and last week Brookline High reversed the tables in an eleven-inning fight.

To realize what a tough game the coming one is to be all one has to do is to look at the record of the teams. No two schools were more bitter rivals than Newton and Brookline, and when they meet in the rubber game to-morrow afternoon the feathers are bound to fly.

MIKE TWIN GETS BAD BEATING

ALBANY, N. Y., June 13.—Mike (Twin) Sullivan of Boston quit in the second round of his scheduled ten-round fight with Kid Henry, the colored man of Troy. Sullivan, to his fifteen years' experience in the ring, was never given such a wicked lacing as he took from Kid Henry in the fatal round to-night.

He claimed a foul, saying Henry had fouled him while he was down on one knee. The referee refused to allow the foul, and Sullivan left the ring. His nose was laid open for at least three inches, and the ring was covered with blood.

CRIMSON CREWS TAKE TWO SPINS ON RIVER

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, Red Top, Ct., June 13.—The Harvard crews were on the river this forenoon at 10-30 o'clock, and go out again this afternoon at 5 o'clock, and this will be kept up until the race day. The men will have four meals each day: breakfast, at 7-30 a. m., a light lunch at 12 o'clock regular; lunch at 3 p. m. and dinner at 7-30 p. m.

On reaching the quarters yesterday the men at once showed for 2 p. m. dinner. The varsity crew was the first on the water, followed by the second varsity four. The varsity four did not go out, as Morgan (No. 3) is suffering from boils and was ordered by the doctor not to row. Waite and Meyer (stroke and No. 2 in the four) rowed in the double shell, while Wiggin (bow) went out in Coach Wray's single.

The freshmen rowed their 150 pound eight an hour after the varsity, and although unable to look around at the objects of which they had heard such exciting tales, they were sent out at once for practice.

All four crews rowed down stream as far as the navy yard and were coached by Jim Wray from the launch. The varsity's rowing, while not as smooth as that of last week in Cambridge, was very good. The men seemed to have a desire to pull (no hard so that the boat, while spasing well, showed slightly uneven strokes.

The freshman eight, while a little off record in their work on Connecticut river, be expected as a result of its being their first time on new water, kept itself fairly along with a good drive. There was evidence of life and dash in the work of all the boats, and the most becoming accustomed to the change from fresh to salt water the quickness of the bunt and the catch should improve. Both the second varsity and freshman four rowed well and followed the signs down to the navy yard.

Dinner waited for men, when they came in from the river at 7 p. m. After dinner Captain Cutler gave the order for all lights out at 9-30, and the rowing call at 7 a. m. The men then busied themselves with getting settled in their various rooms. The varsity eight in the summer boxes, assisted by the crew and year and passed on to Pine Island, the old Brown farm; the varsity fours in "Roosevelt Cottage," and the Brown cottages on the hill; while the freshmen are down below in old Red Top. The men who have examinations today were putting in the hour before bedtime with their books. The exams will be held every day until the 20th.

Considerable excitement was caused by the appearance of O. Reynolds, No. 3 in the freshman eight, bearing a large bird cage, which on investigation proved to contain a bright green parrot. Laurita by name. Laurita attracted much attention and squawked answers to all sorts of calls and sequences. She has been installed as official mascot of the freshman crew.

Yale Daily Grind.

YALE CREW QUARTERS GALES FERRY, Ct., June 13.—Yale oarsmen had another day of routine grind, the morning drill of the varsity bounding out seven miles spit into a paddle down stream and the return trip and toe evening rowing a duplicate of the morning. The freshmen did resort duty for the regulars for five miles of morning and evening practice. The total of fourteen miles made a day of strenuous activity but the wiry of Coach John Kennedy to drive the varsity eight over the course before the arrival of John Harvard's carsmen was mitigated by her which included rough water this morning and fog this evening.

All the Yale varsity work was at stroke except a half-mile race with the freshmen this morning and the same tussle this evening.

The morning spun developed the first stroke which has been rowed under the watch for the season by any of the Yale crews. The half mile was rowed by the freshmen at 2 minutes 28 seconds. Conditions were only fair. The freshmen had been a half mile seven or eight seconds faster on New Haven harbor.

Most of the rowing of the two eights was under a thirty stroke. They drove for speed only once at noon, and once at evening drill, but they easily raised the rate without a sacrifice of smoothness or power.

In the freshman eight a shift was made. Dedham replacing Pearse at No. 4. Pearse was dropped after the first varsity only Saturday, but has had two days of exercise since arriving here. Bird and Bugbee another promising 1904 candidate were taken by Kennedy for pair practice twice. Kennedy acting as coxswain. Bugbee is likely to go into the freshmen before the close of the week. Buckingham was given a rest and Pearse of the freshmen eight was seated at No. 2 in the varsity four, Buckingham's place. There were no other changes.

The freshmen shell, which was badly damaged last week when the youngsters ran it into the float, was launched, fully repaired and the 1904 oarsmen will use it regularly.

Shakeup in Cornell team.

ITHACA, N. Y., June 13.—A sensational shakeup in the Cornell freshman crew, which Coach Courtney intended to take to Poughkeepsie to-day to practice for the intercollegiate regatta, has occurred. Because three freshman oarsmen broke training rules by eating ice cream the varsity coach has dropped them and will take substitutes from the second freshman crew.

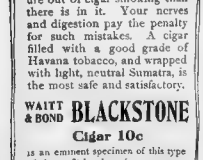
The victims of appetite for ice cream and of Coach Courtney's ire are Manley, No. 2; Wilson, No. 3, and Hall, No. 5.

The coach roundly lectured them for spending so much time around ice cream and soda resort and drove his scolding home with the announcement that they will not be allowed to accompany the varsity navy to Poughkeepsie to-night. The new seating of the freshman boat was not announced.

The camp of the oarsmen on the Hudson will be at Highland, just across the river from Poughkeepsie in the shadow of the railroad bridge which spans the river there. Courtney has sent many a championship shell away from the float there, and not withstanding the ice cream episode, expects to play the old game of "sweeping the river" this year.

Wisconsin Arrives.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 13.—The University of Wisconsin crews arrived here for practice for the Intercollegiate regatta to be held June 27. The men were in charge of Coach Harry Vail and all reported well. The Badgers went out for their first row on the Hudson this morning, using their new shell for the first time. Conc. Vau. found his old rowing out. Jim Rice, with his Columbia squad already on the scene.



Smoking Clear Havana Cigars

is an attempt to get more pleasure out of cigar smoking than there is in it. Your nerves and digestion pay the penalty for such mistakes. A cigar filled with a good grade of Havana tobacco, and wrapped with light, neutral Sumatra, is the most safe and satisfactory.

WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE Cigar 10c

is an eminent specimen of this type of cigar. It has been for many years the favored choice of those smokers who make smoking a pleasure and not a vice.

This year the WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE is a particularly enjoyable cigar. Try one next time you are buying cigars.

DO YOU WANT TO GET $10 EASILY?

The Rustlers sold the Cubs Jacobs a trade of Jacobs's pitchers and somebody got for better of it.

Who was it?

That is the question that is agitating the fans all over Greater Boston.

Catcher Peaches Graham, Pitcher Cliff Curtis and Fielders Collins and Good have gone to the Cubs, and in exchange the Rustlers got Catcher Johnny Kling, who refuses to play; Pitchers Weaver and Griffin and Fielder Kaiser.

What do you think about it? You must have some opinion, and perhaps that opinion is just the very best one there is on the subject.

Take your pen in hand and write that opinion. Then send it to the Baseball Trade Editor of the AMERICAN.

Who got the best of the trade, and why?

To the person who sends the best answer, $10 will be given, to the person who sends the next best, $5 will be awarded, and the writers of the ten next best letters will receive $1 each. Everybody may compete.

Here's a chance to make $10. Already hundreds have sent in their ideas on the subject and today's mail will bring in hundreds. Your's may be the right one. Send it to-day.

CHICAGO, June 13.—The Rustlers part again in Chicago to-day. They hope to win at least one of the series. Yesterday's game was witnessed by John Kling backstop, who has refused to play with the Rustlers, and it is said he will not play to-day, although President Russell and Manager Tenney will not give up hope in the last minute.

At a conference with Manager Tenney and President Russell, Kling spoke what he called his farewell to the national pastime. Kling was much incensed by what he terms as an insulting message from Vice-President Page of the club. He refused to show the telegram to President Russell, but it has angered the backstopper into outstanding strong, that he never will go to Boston.

Russell will have a final conference with Kling to-day, and if he cannot win him over he threatens to bring action against Vice-President Page for the loss sustained.

President Russell said there was no truth in the reports that Kling had gone back on his word to play regularly. He said Mr. Russell, "I consider him the greatest catcher in our league."

BASEBALL CHATTER

In the Fall of 1906, when it was first announced that Hugh Jennings was to succeed Bill Armour as manager of the Tigers, Hugh sat in the stand at Cleveland. His presence unknown to the fans until Lajoie struck a long fly to centre field, George Mullin pitched that game and won it from the Naps. It was the first time Hughey and Ned Mullin were the Tigers got even a hits off Rusty Rhoades and Mullin himself collected four of them. George's wiggling made a big impression on Jennings and he has been doing service as a pitcher ever since.

George Wilson of the Giants was credited with a shutout over the Cincinnati Reds and he was the third left-hander to beat Griffith's reds this season, Harry Salisz and Al Mattern being the other two. When the Red batting order was announced this Spring, everybody thought the team would be safe for the season with so many left-handed hitters among the regulars.

The Western manager started using the side wrecklers against the Reds and it did the trick. Then he got a fit of the jitters and benched them.

Pulliz was the first southpaw to face the Reds. Eight hurlers are having much better success against the Cincinnati team and there wouldn't be so many victories in the Red column but for the jitters on the managers that south paws could down them.

When Billy Purtell was a member of the White Sox, Lou Fiene hit him in the head in batting practice, and he was out of the game for a spell. When he came back the other players thought he was a bashful and that he would never be worth anything as a batter. But in his recent appearances here Billy has shown absolutely no fear of the pitchers. He bats right close from the plate and his cutting has been one of the features of the Red Sox work since he got back into the game.

When Chance shot Maloney, Casey, Briggs and McCarthy to Brooklyn for Jim Sheckard some of the fans thought he was crazy, but Sheckard has been a wonder at Chicago and the other four never did the Dodgers any good. The swap with Joe Cantillon for Murphy, Dunn, Pony Smith, Pony Smith and Bill Donovan was also a masterstroke from a Chicago standpoint.

"Handsome Harry" is winning regulars for the Cubs and Jacobson is the only one of the trio retained by Brooklyn. Then there was exchange with the Cincinnati which gave Chicago Reidschildt and Overall. The Peerless Leader seems to be as good as Clark Griffith is had in the bargaining feature.

* * *

Steve Yerkes isn't likely to be benched for very other man at Washington as he keeps on hitting at his present clip. Steve is there in the pitches and has a habit of figuring in, and starting, Boston's winning rallies. In the games played with each of the Western clubs, Yerkes has been just as big a help on attack as Tris Speaker, and that is saying a lot for him. Practically opposing pitchers will be walking him purposely at crucial moments, just as they pass Tris now.

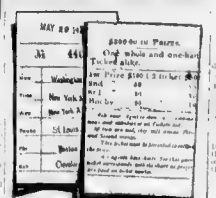
BASEBALL POOL TICKETS THAT CATCH VICTIMS



MORE VICTIMS FOR BALL POOL

Although the exploiters and agents of the Saratoga baseball pools, so-called, have grown more careful since the AMERICAN'S exposure of the latest form of gambling evil, they are still actively carrying on their victimizing of clerks, factory workers and others in Boston.

Reputable merchants in the Wall and Ward Society quarters have refused to take the agents and collectors on their premises, and all of the well known business houses, stores and factories as well as the post offices throughout New England.

More arrests by the Watch and Ward Society are promised for this week. Up to the AMERICAN'S exposure of the baseball pool swindle only one arrest was made. In the meantime the agents have been working harder than ever, and they are compelled to work for a living with the gambling spirit.

Manufacturers and business men in all parts of New England say the evil has grown in such whispered proportions among their employes that it seems to be impossible to suppress it. Special orders have been issued by the heads of many establishments forbidding their employes even to mention baseball pools during business hours, and in one factory in this city a fine of $5 is imposed for each offense. But as pools and the "get-rich-quick" idea are the foundation of the whole gambling system, it is impossible to eradicate the evil entirely.

The alluring figures of the baseball pool are printed at the top of each ticket. Usually the gambler is given the choice of bits ranging from 10 cents a week in the cheapest pool to $1 a week in the highest. The amount, sometimes is increased.

The alluring figures of the baseball pool are printed at the top of each ticket. Usually the gambler is given the choice of bits ranging from 10 cents a week in the cheapest pool to $1 a week in the highest. The amount, sometimes is increased.

But as pools and its "get-rich-quick idea" so the baseball pool has a number of different combinations, the latest being so confusing that not one player in a hundred knows what he is playing at or his chances of winning. The baseball pool is conducted in the same manner as the old-time policy game, and is run in the most disreputable places and by the most disreputable characters.

Barber shops, cigar stores, saloons, billiard parlors and other similar places are the favorite resorts of the baseball pool agents.

TIGERS SAY RED SOX DON'T FIT

By R. W. LARDNER

Just some reason or other I guess I don't count. Pat Dougherty, the new manager of the Washington Americans, has been in baseball for a number of years, and has had charge of several clubs, but he still seems to be under the impression that baseball players are human beings. Pat has a number of high school names whom they go on against the Mack forces. The tigers attribute their recent success to their breaking up of their infield by the injury of Outfielder Red Hoffman. This is no insult to Jim Delehanty, as his hitting in just previous Manager Jennings asked him to and not because he likes the job. The Detroit athletic mentor said the fielding person so eloquently that I take one look at the size of my own and decided that the next time I was in trouble I'd go to Detroit looking for a good left handed pitcher and a second baseman. I had Detroit looks a good deal talented pitcher and a second baseman. I had Detroit looks a good deal talented pitcher and a second baseman. I had Detroit looks a good deal talented

The mighty Starfish Giants went down to defeat yesterday and the Umperiners now lead the league.

Although we have seen lots of faster games, yesterday's contest was rather interesting. The score was 50 to 33. Both teams were pretty evenly matched. Of course, if "Eaglebeak" had been allowed to play for the Starfish Giants they would have won easily, but "Eaglebeak" is in Dutch with the folks at home, and he was barred from taking part.

"Eaglebeak" Spruder is enough to set any manager in the world daffy. If it were not for the fact that he is such a marvel as a pitcher of the pill, our advice to "Skinny" Shaner would be to can him from the team and break it somebody else.

Yesterday's game was the most important of the season for the Starfish Giants. If they had won, "Skinny" Shaner might have stood a chance to be crowned "king of the Neighborhood" at Emily Morton's coronation festivities. "Skinny" has been rather sweet on Emily for a long time, and she favored him somewhat up till yesterday. From the look she gave him after the game, there is no doubt that his goose is cooked. Right away she began making eyes at "Boob" Nelson, the manager of the Umperiners. To tell the truth, we cannot blame her much for letting "Skinny" slide, as no one has much use for a has been.

Emily sprung something on us again yesterday about her coronation stunt. She told us something of it about two weeks ago, and then refused to speak any more. From what she said yesterday, she is going to start in right away and get ready for the big blowout. Her plans are not yet rounded out in fact, she does not divide with the Starfish Giants, but they know who is going to be king, now that "Skinny" Shaner has fallen down. However, she promises that she will give us all the details as soon as she thinks them out.

True to his promise, Mr. Umpers, president of the league, gave each member of the winning team a bag of peanuts directly after yesterday's game. "Boob" Nelson feasted on same to his men that they divide with the Starfish Giants, but "Skinny" Shaner, the manager of the latter team, said that any one accepting "Boob's" offer would be canned. Practically all of the Starfish Giants disobeyed their manager's orders. If "Skinny" meant what he said, he is the only one on the team who has a job.

There is liable to be something doing yet in this league. Things are getting pretty lively right about now

Dangers of New Ideas

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

(Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

AMONG the many privileges which the present era accords to woman is that of "developing the best within her," to use her own favorite phraseology.

It was the generally accepted idea in olden times that a woman must keep to her limited domain of wife or spinster, dependent upon husband or relatives for home and consumption, no matter what wealth of talent in other directions cried for utterance in her soul.

The girl who utilized her talents outside of the domestic sphere was regarded as "strong minded" and masculine, if not worse; and the married woman who dared write, sing, act or recite declassed herself.

That was one extreme. We now seem to have reached the other.

There is an idea prevalent to-day that it is the duty of every woman to seek to express an indefinable something within her which shall establish her individuality.

To many "the most of herself" is every woman's ideal. It is an excellent one; but in pursuing it she needs to be very certain that her conception of "most" would not be estimated as "least" in the eyes of a wiser.

In America the desire for individuality is so prevalent that domestic obligations are frequently put on a par as only as home-hold furniture is, and which the wife and mother sets forth in search of "her best self."

Sex is Broadening

In olden times when a woman forfeited home and its duties for a career, other sisters and mothers turned their backs upon her.

But the sex is broadening in sympathy and intelligence, and its charity is covering a multitude of sins.

A woman who has divorced two or three husbands and shifted her material obligations upon other shoulders in order that she may be free and unhampered in her pursuit of her ideal, meets with a great deal of consideration at the hands of her sister women to-day.

She had to pass through just those experiences—they say, "in order to evolve."

What does a complete evolve? We doubt the great scheme of self-development would suffer another "A woman must do what is fit for her if that good, no matter what it is if it is not made in the process."

If some that conservative lady spoke with regret of a friend who had deserted two homes:

"Don't think that was all right, another She was a good friend and I feel for her a great deal, but the world yet. She is struggling toward the light through all this experience."

The liberality of judgment is more commendable than the casting of stones.

But its philosophy is not to be used to preach freely to ambitious souls to always well-balanced minds.

It is charitable and kind to allow one another's fall was but a step toward a higher states of development, but it becomes a pernicious and dangerous doctrine when a woman begins to think her own development demands a similar sacrifice of near duties and responsibilities.

There is an elastic tendency to this modern philosophy which enables the woman of lawless impulses to hide her shameful sins progressive under its shelter.

The liberal thought of the day regarding woman is full of hope for the erring and remorseful soul, but it is, too, when carried to an extreme, full of danger for the weak and unstable, and it is an excuse for the selfish.

With All Her Might

I do not believe "the best" within a woman was ever developed, save through doing with all her might the nearest duties.

Of course there may be a diversity of opinions regarding those duties, but given a conscience and common sense should be the guide.

It is not a duty to sacrifice life and strength to the service of a brutal, selfish and vicious husband, who has broken every vow he took at the altar, yet insists that his wife shall live up to the letter of hers.

In such a case it is a woman's nearest duty to get as far from the man as possible, and not lay her future upon the same pyre which has consumed her past.

But the woman who allows her ambition and her vanity to lead her to sacrifice a good husband's happiness, merely because she feels she can shine on the plane of art with a more effulgent light alone (or with another man) violates a principle which disturbs the harmony of society.

When she relinquishes her children for any aim or ambition, however exalted, no matter what her attainments may be, she has but repeated Zaza's largein of old.

In such a case it is a woman's nearest duty to get as far from the man as possible, and not lay her future upon the same pyre which has consumed her past.

But the woman who allows her ambition and her vanity to lead her to sacrifice a good husband's happiness, merely because she feels she can shine on the plane of art with a more effulgent light alone (or with another man) violates a principle which disturbs the harmony of society.

When she relinquishes her children for any aim or ambition, however exalted, no matter what her attainments may be, she has but repeated Zaza's largein of old.

"Look what she has achieved!" I have heard women say of one who had acquired fame and gold. "She had to fling away all trammels and ties in order to become just what she is."

But on a good man's life, and on the lives of innocent children, rested a duty, a what, in some lights, seemed to be a stain.

Was her fame and her gold worth the price the made others pay?

Success in an Aim

I have seen a man who succeeded in an aim—a petty ambition from our standpoint but no smaller than the founding of an empire or the winning of immortal fame must seem in God's eyes.

This man wanted the road to the nearest village, three miles distant, to run through his property, because it would bring him an amount of money which seemed like a fortune in his small eyes. The man's property was all hills and stones.

The selectmen planned to have the road go around these hills, over level meadows. But the man was a strong willed, persistently scheming. He succeeded and gloried in his success.

That was years ago. To-day thousands of loads become stone sprung and lame and spattered, scores of vehicles break down, wheelmen meet with accidents, and long series of summer residents and tourists become unstrung because of these hills and valleys, which must be traversed to reach the town, the trolley or the train.

Was the price worth to the man the price humanity has to pay for it. Before we lay out any road to the heights of glory or of power it would be well for us to ask ourselves whose peace, comfort or happiness must be sacrificed by it.

It is our privilege to give up personal comfort and personal happiness, if we choose to do so, in order to accomplish a certain purpose.

It is not our privilege or our right to immolate others upon the altar of our ambitions.

There is no success in any line of art which can repay us for the knowledge that her child suffers at the mention of her name.

Let us be lenient in our judgment of such women, but let us not put them on a pinnacle as beings to be worshipped and emulated.

A SUSPICIOUS WORLD

"Nope," said Farmer Corntassel, "there's no use o' tryin' to raise me to run for the Legislature."

"But you are so prosperous now that you can afford the time."

"That's just it. The farm is payin' so well that I kin afford a few fallows. I want to be able to build a new barn and buy an automobile without people thinkin' at graft."

Bruft & Chumpert's sales at Fresh Beef in Bolton for the week ending Saturday, June 10, averaged 8.05 cents per pound.

A Woman Suffrage Poem

By MARAH COVINGTON

The following verses, entitled "The Dream Castle of the Suffrage Women," by Marah Covington, was inspired by an editorial which appeared recently in the AMERICAN

WE builded a palace of peace and love,
And our hearts have sung in its halls;
Its doors are of crystal and golden sheen,
And mother-of-pearl are its walls.

Its draperies fair are the gossamer strands
Of our beautiful thoughts and dreams;
Soft music comes floating from unseen hands,
And each thing is there what it seems.

There Justice may dwell with unbandaged eyes
And shining brow that all may see;
A radiant form gleams Truth, undefiled,
Clothed only in verity.

Behold this our structure! So fair and sweet,
As its turrets and towers rise,
And the guests that come shall put from their feet
The dust of the world of lies.

Oh woman so tender, and woman true —
Yea, or woman all false and wrong! —
Make to our castle a pilgrimage;
Bring with you a hope and a song.

The cloak of your falseness drops with the dust
That belongs to the world of flies;
The distaff of courage shall spin new robes,
And the foolish shall here grow wise.

We have called the name of our mansion fair
Equality Castle, Palace of Right,
Where the sons of men and daughters of men
Hands shall clasp at its portals white.

There join in one brave, harmonious throng,
To work for the good of the whole;
Together plan the uplifting of man,
The glorious rise of the soul.

A Successful Wife

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT
By G. DORSET

Copyright, 1910, by Harper & Brothers.

He exclaimed: Never—never—except for me! When you came into the Roxburys' drawing room to-night I couldn't believe my eyes. Of course you don't know how you looked—you are so utterly unconscious of yourself. But you made every woman in the room tawdry and poor. I don't pretend to say what it is, my dear girl, but you've got it! Or, rather," he said, more softly still, "I've got it, and it belongs to me."

He put his arms around me then and said, "Look at me, my dear girl," and the expression I had seen the day of the "umbrella" dodge in Bond street was on his face, only this time it remained and did not fade; and he whispered, "Call me by my name."

And I waited until I had opened up every door in my mind that was shut against him, and I said, "Stephen!"

And he kissed me as he had never done before—never, and I thought of all he had fought for and fought over, and how hard things had been for him, and how he really hadn't anything or anybody to stand by him but me—just me, to begin with—to go West with. And I felt sorry for him, and something broke that had been hard against him always—and I put my arms around him, and he laid his head down on my breast.

A New Start

The end of that week we were on the cars going North. He had just thrown up his position with Senator Roxburg like a flash. But he had agreed to transact some important business in New York, and so we went there to start West.

My husband drew pictures of the West, of the "great plains," and said that he had always wanted to go West, and that now he was "being curried on by the chariots of Fate."

"Do you know, Esther, I was inspired very much by a speech my uncle made in the Senate last week? He was speaking, in the good old-time mass fell of regeneration of the seed for fresh spirits from fresher plane. There is 'intoxication' in the West—in the Occident," and he smiled as he used that word.

"I don't mean to frighten you with that term—the word intoxication, my dear girl—but the wheat fields have several ways of stimulating a man—his brain, his mind and his body. Don't forget that they give us bread."

Though we had been in Washington only six months, it was a lifetime for us, and we brought away a new career for Stephen, a lot of experience for me and a Worth gown that cost $300. I could give that to Fanny—I didn't believe I would need it in the wheat fields Stephen was dreaming about.

At Trenton my husband got a telegram from Senator Roxburg saying the man he was to see in New York was very ill, and we decided we'd go right out by the next uptown train.

When we arrived at Jersey City it was 5 o'clock. All around was a rush of people for the suburban trains. We wandered side by side toward the gates with the crowd; we were the last to go through, and at our side was the big flyer for Chicago, with the little dining tables set and the waiters in their white coats. A gateman called out:

"Buffalo!—Rochester!—Cleveland!—all points West!—and on the other side a man sang out:

"Brackettsville first stop."

It was the express the office people took out home, and I knew it pretty well—I had taken it night after night for ten years.

I knew the conductors and the gateman and the shady boys selling the newspaper boys, and the old station with the restaurant and the flies and the fruit and the smell of everything, and the ferry boats coming in "bumping" against the piers.

"Shall I go and see about the baggage," I asked Stephen, "while you get the tickets?"

Old Dreamy Smile

He was standing in the door of the waiting room, smiling in his old, dreamy way. "Don't you like your boys' home, Esther?"

"I guess so; they usually take the first eight

"Buffalo!—Rochester!—Cleveland; and all points West!—forward on the right."

And to me Stephen said out in a voice like the man's

"Chicago, Asia and Africa on the left—to-day. What is in a place, after all, or city?"

Well, I thought you never wanted to go back again."

"Recently, I wouldn't have been sur prised if he had started going down and up the aisle shouting: "Nothing ever—I like in those days.

I felt keyed up all the time—we were being whirled our way—we were making our and now I ran back and see, as the sparks fly out behind our train

"Esther! My husband said:

"—said I didn't want to see Brackett again, did I, Esther? Let's go

His hand on my arm and turned me toward the other side of the station, where the lines of commuters were walking along with their newspaper bundles—the weary, quiet procession of which I was part for years of my life.

Stephen said, "never mind the We can give our wheels up to Moore at the Brackettsville station. He'll send for them." And as he helped me up the steps of the old train he laughed "Your Worth gown isn't in any hurry to get to Brackettsville, is it? We are!"

He bought a lot of papers from the boy and some marshmallows for me. He was as coy as a child, and took off his hat to some people who were coming back from a business in New York.

"Keep a watch out of your window for the boys, Esther," he says. "They will be utterly surprised to see us, won't they?" And he laughed again. Here we were making back to Brackettsville, which had left in a kind of family disgrace when he was married, to West—no fields at all—just the old place.

The itinerary of the tour was changed, sure enough, but somehow or other the fire in our hearts all died down you Stephen took hold of my hand and said.

A Little House

"One twig is as good as another to start from if you are going to fly, and, anyway, I want to see the old place."

I remembered what his uncle had said about starting, and I was glad, anyway, that I wasn't taking back to Brackettsville the same man I had taken away.

The boys came along about then. They had grown awfully. Pete was nearly six feet tall. I couldn't believe my eyes.

We took a little scrap of a house, with a garden, by the year. The boys and Fanny came and boarded with us, and Stephen and we were "founding a family."

Right away he went to New York and took a small, insignificant position in a lawyer's firm. I never had known that he had been through the Harvard Law school and admitted to the bar before he went abroad.

Of course, he was as good at that as at everything else. A real genius. I knew that office would be too narrow for him, and after a while he would shake it off like a shell.

Even in the first year the Brackettsville people began to talk about him and of how first rate he was at the law, and now that he didn't drink a drop he could work harder and longer than any man I ever saw.

That Spring I used to wish that we had a child. It seemed as though things were settling down, and I would have loved it. But it wasn't to be

Privileges of the King

By HUNTINGTON HOPE

THERE are many curious matters of law, of rule and regulation, and of etiquette, which constitute the divinity which "doth hedge a king." For some there are historical reasons in their origin, for others such reason still exist, others are mere matters of admitted propriety, others simply the crystallization of long custom and observance.

In some matters the King of England is governed by statute, in others he and his more wishes are supreme, but even in the latter category there are matters in which that pleasure must be conveyed in writing.

The sovereign pays no rates or taxes. The reason for this is that theoretically all taxes are levied in the King's name, for the purpose of carrying on the government, and that, as in fact it would have been before the days of the Civil List, to tax the income of the King, for the purpose of defraying the King's expenditures was simply taking money from one of his pockets to put it into another.

So stringently is this theory adhered to that the exemption from taxation extends to the furniture of the person of the sovereign, and all other members of the royal family are subject to the same taxation as the rest of the people. The matter was settled by the Queen Consort in connection with his farming experiments at Windsor.

Has to Pay Bills

But the King does not evade the payment of his just debts, and contrary to what is often supposed and frequently stated, the King pays from his privy purse both for his special trains and theatre tickets. If the King proposes to visit a theatre, notice is sent beforehand, and the royal box, in those theatres which possess one, is sold subject to the condition that it must be given up if intimation is received that its use is required for His Majesty.

It is the accepted etiquette that the King never writes a letter. Those who need to correspond with His Majesty, who are aware of the right procedure, usually write to the King's secretary or a member of the household, asking that the matter in question should be placed before the King. Letters addressed to the King on the prerogative in any form on matters of State are required to be submitted through the home office.

The King does not accept invitations, and a visit of any form is not preceded thereby, but by his intimation that he will pay it. In other words, he always invites himself, and in matters of social intercourse the same etiquette extends to other members of the royal family. The Queen Consort never invites husband to the establishment of a bachelor

Revises Guest Lists

If the King proposes to visit any house, a list of the proposed guests has to be submitted to him beforehand, and this list the King revises, striking out such names as he pleases. There are a number of little details of etiquette which are observed, the most noticeable of which is that fingerbowls are never placed upon the table if a member of the royal family is present. The reason for this goes back to Jacobite days, when the toast of the King was converted into treason by the passing of the glass "over the water."

The King never accepts a present from a private person, except, of course, his own relatives, and never permits the dedication of a book to himself if there is the slightest likelihood of the extension of this dedication for commercial purposes. The rule, however, is relaxed to the extent of the frequent acceptance of copies of books from the authors, but in such cases the book is required to be bound according to a specified pattern.

No one proposes for the hand of a royal princess in marriage. The Sovereign intimates first that such a match would be permitted, and no member of the English Royal Family can marry without the consent of the King. If over the age of twenty-five they may marry without the royal sanction by giving twelve months' notice to the Privy Council, unless during that time the two Houses of Parliament have expressed disapproval.

The Queen Consort

The Queen Consort, although a subject, has always had a unique position in the eyes of the law, as she has always been regarded as free from the disabilities of a married woman, and in all matters of property, contract and procedure she ranks as a femme sole.

The use of the royal "we," though still preserved in formal documents of any kind, like the old-time "mewing for the King's Evil," is gradually lapsing into disuse, King Edward having followed the example of Queen Victoria in his three messages "To my People," "To my People Beyond the Seas," and "To the Princes and People of India," dated February 4, 1901, which was written in the first person singular.

The King has no surname, and though undoubtedly he is a peer—the first among his peers—as Sovereign he never sits in the House of Peers, the Cap of Maintenance is still carried before him in his palace of Westminster—and nowhere else—a sign of his right of peerage.

The King's motor-cars carry no number, and his chauffeurs are not amendable to exceeding the speed limit.

The King cannot bind his successors in the exercise of the royal prerogative, for the simple reason that there is no way of enforcing the obligation, inasmuch as the King cannot be sued in his own courts.

For the Girl Who is Going Abroad

A GIFT for the girl who is going to Europe this Summer will be a pocket guidebook. Even if she has Baedeker for the journey, a small one that can be tucked into a bag will be useful.

There is a new book of this type brought up to date for 1911 and written by travelers of such experience as the Stedmans. It is called "Complete Pocket Guide to Europe," and will prove invaluable.

With it might go a pocket size edition of "Travel Talk," by Murray. This gives necessary phrases for meeting all needs of life in all languages, and with it one cannot be stranded even if without the gift of tongues, so long as the other fellow can read.

Copyright, 1911, National News Association.

Claude Eclaire is loading the pirates' treasure into the Deadwood coach in order to make quicker time getting away from desperate Desmond and his gang. Naturally, our hero is taking Rosamond with him also. She is more precious in his eyes than all the gold and jewels that all the pirates in the world ever gathered together.

But Desmond is not going to let that treasure get away from him without making a fight for it. Followed by his faithful gang, he gives chase to the coach. And luck seems to favor him, for the outfit has come to a standstill near the top of a steep acclivity, and all the villain has to do is to massacre a few Indians and cowboys.

As Desmond and his henchmen are able to manoeuvre out in the open, while the coach is still stuck in the creek, losing the treasure, it looks like a clinch for the villain. But our hero evidently has something up his sleeve. He has unharnessed the horses and is driving them to right and left of the coach. What's the idea?

Ah, now we see. As the villain draws near the coach and is about to open fire, he suddenly discovers that he is surrounded. Each of the coach horses has an Indian or a cowboy for a rider, though they have hitherto remained concealed in order to throw Desmond off his guard. And just think, Claude thought it all out himself.

There's no use talking, that Claude Eclaire is a whole lot cleverer than some people are willing to give him credit for being. Even we, ourselves, have, at times, spoken slightingly of his mental capacity, but we take it all back now. We may make mistakes occasionally, but we're game enough to own up to it when we do.

Our hero has decided that there is only one thing to do with Desmond and his gang, and that is to exterminate the whole tribe. It's not going to be a fancy execution either. Just plain, ordinary hanging is good enough for that bunch. The only thing that worries us is that something may happen to queer the stunt in to-morrow's pictures.

Their Reasons for Marrying

By ADA PATTERSON.

A PROFESSOR of the University of Chicago has been making a few more remarks about women. It seems that most of the advice given to or about women comes from the professors of the University of Chicago. The present speaker is Professor Sinesia, and he laments that women are financially dependent upon men. He says that financial dependence is the cause of many marriages. This is what, he says, causes "women of a million dollar personality to waste herself upon a thousand dollar man."

The need of support is, doubtless, the reason for many marriages. Some women marry for this reason and so do some men. At this moment I recall four men who told me they had bestowed their dear selves upon rich women in return for an unearned living for the rest of their lives. Not one of the quartet seemed ashamed to say so. One of them gleefully described his state as that of one who "had fallen into a keg of butter." He has since climbed out of the keg by way of a suit for alienation of his wife's affection by his father-in-law, whose retort was that he had not alienated his daughter's affection from her husband because she had not recently had any affection to alienate, and that he had merely told the daughter what she had herself discovered, that her husband "was no good."

For Family Fund

Another married his deceased wife's sister out of a deep affection for the family fund, of which he had long before dissipated his first wife's shares. Oh, yes, men marry for money and the least of them are not ashamed to confess it. One of them wrapped around the admission the verbal cloak, "It seemed the reasonable thing to do." Another informed me, "You have no idea how much more comfortable a man is keeping house than in a hotel."

So you see it is not the petticoated sex alone that make marriages of convenience. I have heard a man use a woman's phrase in expressing his desire to marry. "I want to be taken care of," he said. Since his income was equal to the demands two persons could make upon it, the fact was that he wanted some one to fetch and carry more quickly and willingly than his valet did.

A male dyspeptic told me without apology that he married because his stomach could no longer endure hotel fare. It was home cooking or death, and while he didn't want to marry, he preferred marriage to the tragic alternative.

A bachelor who had lived so long alone that one wondered at the uncleanness of marriage for the few years that might be left for him, said that a boy had a hard time. He always got the worst of everything. "If there was an ugly room or a hard chair or an unpleasant job the boy in the family always got it," he said. "I want to know how it seems to be the first to be considered, the chief head of the household. It is my last experiment before I die."

Men are as whimsical as women in their motives for matrimony. "No man," a wise man declared, "ever really intended to marry. He didn't even intend to ask the girl when he began. He just started and the full stream of the momentum carried him along."

An Odd Motive

The oddest motive for matrimony I ever heard was what a divorcee assigned. "My first stepfather was annoying me about family matters, and I married to get rid of him," she said. The same woman deserted her husband and afterward divorced him because she was tired of hearing him talk politics.

If a man or woman is possessed of a tremendous ambition, it is better for their possible mate and for themselves that they should not marry.

There is only one good reason for matrimony. That is that the tangle of a girl's hair gets into a man's eyes, shutting out the rest of the world to him; that the radiance of a girl's smile illuminates his day or its absence darkens it; that there are two suns in the firmament for him and they are a girl's eyes. She may be a very ordinary girl to the rest of the human family, a spalpeened girl, a freckled girl; but for some reason only nature knows she is the girl for him, and nature makes him know it by blinding him with the tangle of her hair and the radiance of her eyes, and by making a habit of her day by day smile. That is nature's command to marry, the only sufficient motive for matrimony.

Herbs for the Table

THERE is a goodly supply of Spring delicacies in the hedges, which the housewife in her wisdom uses for her health's sake in salads. Foremost among the wild greens is dandelion, a valuable medicine for the liver.

Cooked alone it is good, but its bitter flavor may be mitigated by mingling it with spinach.

Dandelion salad is extremely wholesome in September. Take the young and tender green leaves of the plant and wash them thoroughly with cold water, but do not bruise the leaves. Lay them in a glass dish and pour over two tablespoonfuls of olive oil, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, pepper, salt, and sugar to taste.

Little early shoots of corn, cooked, or served as a salad, are another much appreciated delicacy.

Sorrel, too. Both the French and Germans make delicious soups, salads and other dishes of the vegetable, the fresh acid of which is wholesome on languid Spring days. Gather a few handfuls and cook it as you would cook a puree of spinach, and serve it as a relish with roast beef instead of horseradish sauce, or with lamb instead of mint sauce.

Sorrel makes a good addition to spinach, if you use three-quarters spinach and one-quarter sorrel.

In cooking these acid herbs and green stuffs a porcelain vessel must be used, and not a metal one.

Nettle soup may be treated with advantage in just the same way.

A few leaves of sorrel added to any salad improve its flavor, but whenever you use sorrel in salad mix less vinegar than usual with the dressing, as the acid in sorrel is well-nigh sufficient.

For a watercress salad the following is a good Italian recipe:

Wash three or four bunches of watercress and drain them; slice four or five cold boiled potatoes very thin, and mix with the following sauce: Four tablespoonfuls of oil, half a tablespoonful of vinegar, salt and black pepper to taste, one shallot minced up fine, half a pinch of cayenne and half a tablespoonful of mustard.

Sorrel may likewise be made into a puree either with a meat stock or maigre, and is delicious if stewed. Boil some chopped sorrel until tender and rub through a sieve into a stewpan. Add a tablespoonful of bechamel sauce, a little salt and pepper and two ounces and a half of fresh butter. Stew a few minutes and serve.

The bechamel sauce is made like this: Mix three tablespoonfuls of butter and three of flour to a smooth paste; put half an onion and half a carrot sliced, a little bit of mace, two teacupfuls of white stock, a pinch of salt and grated nutmeg and a bouquet in a stewpan; simmer for half an hour, stirring often; then add one teacupful of cream, boil at once, strain and serve.

CHASE & SANBORN'S HIGH GRADE TEAS & COFFEES

Queen Mary's Earrings

IT is because Queen Mary is never seen without earrings that so many smart women of to-day are wearing them. Her Majesty has a really fine collection of these ornaments, some of which are of great beauty and interest. Many fine pairs were bequeathed to the Queen by her late mother, Mary Duchess of Teck, who also had a great penchant for earrings. For day wear the Queen usually favors short earrings, generally of single stones which rest on the ear, but in the evening she affects the picturesque long shape. Her ears are pierced in old-fashioned style, and she will have nothing to do with the screw fastenings which are almost universally used today.

The De Bercy Affair

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

By GORDON HOLMES

Copyright, 1910, by Edward J. Clode

BUT she did not unbend.

"Let us first find her; and then other things may be discussed. But to find her! It is past all knowing—Oh, deep is the trouble of my soul to-day, Mr. Osborne!"

"Wait—hope——"

"But you were speaking of yesterday."

"Yes. She was at the inquest; and when I saw her—think how I felt! She believes in me." And three days after that she wrote to me——"

"My poor Rosalind!" murmured Mrs. Marsh. "She suffered more than I imagined. Her nature is more reconditie than the well in which truth dwells. What could she have written to you?"

"That I don't know."

"How——?"

"As I was about to open the letter a telegram came from her. 'Don't read my letter; I will call for it unopened in person,' it said.

"Picture my agony then! And now I am going to tell you something that will move you to compassion for me, if you never had it before. Yesterday she called for the letter. I was with you at Porchester Gardens all that very hour. When I came home, an extraordinary scene awaited me with my secretary, a Miss Prout. . . . I tell you this as to a friend, a Mother, who will believe even the incredible. An extraordinary scene.

"Without the least warning, the least encouragement that I know of, Miss Prout declared herself in love with me. While I stood astonished she fainted. I bore her to a sofa. Soon after she opened her eyes, she—there—no to her—no, I will say that I was not to blame; and I was in that situation, when the library door opened, and who should be there looking at me but—yes—she."

Her Eyes Fell

Mrs. Marsh's eyes fell. There was a little pressure of the lips that revealed scant sympathy with compromising situations. And suddenly a thought turned her skin to gleaming white.

What if the sight of that scene accounted for Rosalind's disappearance? If Rosalind was dead—by her own act? The old lady had often to admit that she did not know the deepest deeps of her daughter's character. But she banished the half-thought hurriedly, contenting herself with saying aloud:

"That made the second time she came to you yesterday. Why a second time?"

"I have no idea!" was the dismayed reply. "She uttered not one word—just turned away, and hurried out to her waiting cab—and by the time I could wring myself free, and run after her, the cab was going off.

"I shouted—I ran at top speed—she would not stop. I think a man was in the cab with her——"

"A man, you say?"

"I think so. I just caught a glimpse of a face that looked out sideways—a dark man he seemed to me—I'm not sure."

"It becomes more and more mysterious!"

"Well, we must be making a move to do something—first, have you breakfasted?"

She had eaten nothing! Osborne persuaded her to join him in a hurried meal, during which his motor car arrived, and soon they set off together.

He was for going straight to the police, but she shrank from the notoriety of that final exposure until she had the clear assurance that it was absolutely necessary. So they drove from friend to friend of the Marshes who might possibly have some information; then drove home to Mrs. Prawder's to see if there was news.

Osborne and luncheon there—a polite pretence at eating, since they were too full of wonder and woe to care for food. By this time Mrs. Marsh had unbent somewhat to Osborne, and humbly enough had said to him, "Oh, dear her, and if she be alive every other consideration shall weigh less than my boundless gratitude to you!"

After the luncheon they again drove about London, making inquiries without hope wherever the least chance of a clue lay; and finally, near 6, they went to Scotland Yard.

Tale Was Told

To Inspector Winter in his office she whole tale was told; and, after sitting at his desk in a long silence, frowning upon the story, he said at last:

"Well, there is, of course, a great deal more in this than meets the eye." He spun round to Mrs. Marsh: "Has your daughter undergone anything to upset her at home lately?"

"Nothing," was the answer. "One of the servants in the house has had a sort of hysteria; but that did not trouble Rosalind beyond the mere exercise of womanly sympathy."

"Any visitors? Any odd circumstances in that way?"

"No unusual visitors—except an Inspector Furneaux, who—twice, I think—had interviews with her. She was not very explicit in telling me the subject of them."

"Inspector Furneaux," muttered Winter, as he himself he made a note. "I remember that this thing was connected with Feldsham Mansions." And at once now, with a fresh start; he asked: "Was by the way, is the name of the servant who has had the hysteria?"

"Her name is Pauline," answered Mrs. Marsh—"a French girl."

"Ah, Pauline!" said Winter—"just so."

The fewness of his words gave proof of the activity of his brain. He knew how Clarke had obtained the diary of Rose de Bercy from Pauline, and he felt that Pauline was in some undetermined way connected with the murder.

He knew, too, that she was now to be found somewhere in Porchester Gardens, and had intended looking her up for general inquiries before two days had passed.

That Pauline might actually have had a hand in the crime had never entered into his speculations—he was far too hot in these days on the trail of Furneaux, who was being constantly watched by his instructions.

"I think I will see this Pauline to-night," he said. "Meantime, I can only recommend you to hope, Mrs. Marsh. Hopeful things generally have some simple explanation in the end, and turn out less black than they look. Expect me, then, at your residence within an hour."

But when Mrs. Marsh and Osborne were gone he was perplexed, remembering that this was Thursday evening, for he had promised himself on this very evening to be at a spot which he had been told by one of his men that Furneaux had visited on two previous Thursday evenings, for spot where he would see a sight that would interest him.

While he was on the horns of the dilemma as to going there, or going to Pauline, Inspector Clarke entered; and at once Winter shelved upon Clarke the business of sounding Pauline.

Orders for Clarke

"You seem to have a lot of power over her—do better, and up the diary as promptly," he said to Clarke. "Go to her, then, get at the bottom of this business, and see if you cannot hit upon some connection between the disappearance of Miss Marsh and the murder of the actress."

Clark stood up with alacrity, and started off. Presently Winter himself was in a cab, making for the Brompton Cemetery.

As for Clarke, the instant he was within sight of Porchester Gardens, his whole interest turned from Pauline Desaulx and the vanished Rosalind to two men whom he saw in the street almost opposite the house in which Pauline lay.

They were Janoc and the Italian, Antonio, and Antonio seemed to be reasoning and pleading with Janoc, who had the gestures of a man distracted.

Hanging about near them was a third man, whom Clarke hardly noticed—a loafer in a long coat of rags, a hat without any crown, and visible tops of diminutive loafer-Furneaux, in fact, who, for his own reasons, was also interested in Janoc in these days.

Every now and again Janoc looked up at the windows of Mrs. Marsh's residence with frantic gestures and a crying face—a thing which greatly struck Clarke; and soon the loafer passed by Janoc and Antonio, unobserved, picked up the gutter for the cast-aside ends of cigars and cigarettes.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WAIT A WHILE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty years old, and for the past eight years have been friendly with a young man of the same age.

He is considered by all a gentleman of the highest type, and for this reason and in view of our long acquaintance I have learned to love him.

He has frankly admitted that he does not love me, but that he cares more for me than for any other girl.

He rarely, if ever, goes about, because of study at the university, but when he does take me to the theatre I am treated like a queen.

In fact, when in my presence he appears as though he really loves me.

Recently he heard that I had been to the theatre with a young man for whom he has a strong dislike, and he showed signs of jealousy, and since his actions have changed completely.

My pride is stronger than my love, but I am so troubled now that I feel I never can become so attached to any young man as to him. I do not care for the second young man, but could and never would tell the former for fear he would become too self-possessed.

What shall I do? C. C. A.

THERE is nothing for you to do but to wait.

Do not think too much about this man or show him, in any way, how you feel.

He probably does love you, but you have known each other so long that he is sure of your feelings and has not yet felt the necessity of making a decision.

When he realizes there is a possibility of losing you, he will be awakened.

SEND BACK HIS RING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man for three months. He is two years my senior. I am eighteen.

Lately he has not been calling upon me, and I received a letter from him telling me of his love for a very beautiful heiress.

I am a poor working girl and I think I am more suitable for him. He is only a clerk in a hotel.

Do you think I had better take off my engagement ring or leave it on and let him come and see me again.

TROUBLED.

THIS man has not treated you with civility or respect, and is unworthy of your regard.

Send him back his ring and make him understand that your friendship is at an end.

You are very young, and by waiting a few years you will have a chance to find a man able to make you truly happy.

TELL HER THE TRUTH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am not quite eighteen. Last September, while on my vacation, I met a very pretty girl. Two years my senior, who fell in love with me.

She has written regularly every week, and though I have answered her letters I have tried to make it a point not to see her, thinking she might forget me. Once she came and told me of her affection.

Now, what am I to do I like her better than any girl of my acquaintance, and yet I do not think I will ever feel able to return her love.

A. W. M.

YOUR friend-hip with her will be all the closer if there is an absolute understanding between you. Tell her that she has been mistaken in the regard you have for her, which has been one of great admiration and friendship, but nothing further.

It would be unfair to have her imagine anything that wasn't true, and I think your honesty in the matter will help you more than any other course.

You can always be friends, and I think it is much wiser to wait until you are much older before asking a girl to marry you.

RETURN HIS GIFTS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have known a young man for the past eight months and have received a few expensive presents from him. I have partied with him and would like to know whether I should return him the presents or not?

F. D.

I ADVISE you to return the presents at once. It is not fair to the man to keep what he has given you in the expectation of making you his wife.

Nor would it be agreeable to you to have those reminders of a painful experience.

She Writes of Her Mother, Among the First to Answer Call for Universal Disarmament

SOME years ago the Czar of Russia made an appeal for universal disarmament, and it is the boast of my mother, Mrs. Leander John Appleton, that she was the first woman in the world to respond.

Rising from her chair, where she had been reading the reports of the Peace Conference at The Hague, she hastened into the dining room and, reaching behind the door, she took down from the wall a bundle of peach tree switches she had used for years to chastise my brother, Chauncey Devere, and me when we did wrong.

"I can never be sold of me," she said, throwing the switches into the fire, "that I do not sanction universal disarmament."

From that day to this neither of us was ever punished, and she always had good excuses when we misbehaved.

On one occasion, when Chauncey Devere was twelve, he came into the parlor where mother was entertaining a caller, threw his hat on the floor, kicked over a chair, and growled that he wanted his dinner, "and be quick about it!"

"You must excuse my son's bad manners," said my mother to her caller, "he was sick when a child and because of his sickness we humored him till he became spoiled."

"Was he sick long?" asked the caller, expecting to hear, no doubt, of days and weeks and months of pain, and a suffering prolonged for years.

"Oh, yes," replied me mother with a sigh, "he had the measles six days when he was three years old, and since then we have always had to let him have his own way."

From "Tales of Mother and Child," shortly to be published by Daysey Mayme Appleton.

Learn to Walk Well

A STARTLING fact that is constantly revealed by the present fashions is the almost universal lack of grace in the modern girl.

The short and narrow skirt so much seen is merciless in this respect. It boldly refuses to disguise the jerky, awkward stride of the average girl, and one is more and more impressed with the rarity of the girl who knows how to walk well.

This is astonishing when one considers how much the modern girl goes in for all kinds of sports and calisthenics, yet one scarcely ever sees a girl who walks correctly, and the really graceful girl is unique. When she is seen she charms the eye and possesses an attraction that does not depend on youth or beauty.

Every girl should strive to walk well, and with patience and the observance of a few rules she can soon improve her carriage. And certainly it needs improving, for the hunched shoulders and protruding chin of the modern girl borders on the grotesque.

An old-fashioned rule for attaining a graceful poise of the neck and shoulders which many of our grandmothers practiced daily, is to walk with a book upon the head, and it should not be allowed to fall off.

The arms, shoulders, and the back of the head should all be level when starting to walk, and the chest well thrown out. Swinging arms are never graceful. They should hang easily, but were never intended to help propel the body along.

One should avoid the mannish stride as well as the mincing gait. There is a happy means, and the length of stride a girl can gracefully take depends, of course, upon her height and length of limb. Walk from the hip, not from the knee. Swing the arms easily from the shoulder up. Don't meander aimlessly along or violently stride ahead.

When you go for a walk have an object in view and pursue it steadily and smartly, and you will find that your walking gains in poise and grace.

Do not fall into the habit of looking down when you walk, but keep the eyes lifted and fixed steadily to the front. Looking constantly on the ground cultivates unsteadiness and insecurity.

No girl with an atom of vanity will allow herself to care in at the back. Nothing so quickly lends pos in the middle-aged class. And fear as much as the back slinks so much does the abdomen protrude, and that stamps one as hopelessly graceless.

Banana Salad

BANANA salad is not cooked, but is appetizing for those who like such a rich mixture. Serve plain on lettuce hearts covered thickly with mayonnaise or mix with equal parts of orange sections sprinkled with chopped nuts.

AT THE PLAY

Mrs. Posey—"Meecy, Hiram! Them awful society women dress like they was goin' swimmin'!"

Mr. Posey—"O' course, Jerusha. Hain't you heard tha't in th' nosiful swim, th' wimmin try to outstrip each other?"

FRECKLES

New Drug That Quickly Removes These Homely Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as a new drug, othine—double strength, has been discovered that is a positive cure for these homely spots.

Simply get one ounce of othine—double strength, from Houghton & Dutton or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co., and apply a little of it at night, and in the morning you will see that even the worst have begun to disappear, while the light freckles have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double-strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove the freckles.

LOTS OF AMUSEMENT FOR EVERYBODY, BOTH IN AND OUT OF DOORS

Animal acts appear to be all the rage on the vaudeville stage at present. Last week it was Cotsal, the educated monkey, that topped the bill at Keith's. This week Jeff, the boxing kangaroo, is the star attraction and the way he lets loose with those swings, jabs, jolts and uppercuts would do credit to any of the present crop of "white hopes." Jeff spars three rounds with the Gordon brothers, and they have all they can do to prevent themselves from being put away by the four-limbed creature from the Antipodes.

Eddie Leonard's act is one of the best on the bill. The famous minstrel has a bunch of new songs and incidentally works in a few of the old ones. They go, however, as endless encores as the best of the antiquated numbers when Leonard sings them. It is the way he has. Leonard also does some clever dancing assisted by Mabel Russell. Miss Russell's impersonation of one chorus girl's talk to another is a scream, and her singing and dancing are also clever.

Marion Merrill and Janet Hilton two Boston girls, have a pretty and original specialty in "The Maid of Cinnabar," with Miss Merrill as Linda M Blodgood. Miss Merrill and Miss Hilton are rapidly advancing to the front in the line of vaudeville performers and their act is one of the features of the show.

A lot of fun and some sweet music is crammed into the musical frivolity, "The Piano Store," by Harry Delmore and Anita Lawrence. Charles and Fanny Van, the old time Boston favorites, have a laughable skit in "A Case of Emergency." Arthur Whitelaw in "The Toy Boy" of the Manila song in which he describes an old Irish man pretending to become after a long absence, is one of the best things seen on a vaudeville stage in a long while and also has some new songs and some good stories. Martinetti and Sylvester, in their "Amusing Attempt at Suicide?" are getting many a laugh with their chair stunt; Gertrude and Rose Bailey have some pretty acrobatic dances and the Dancing Fays are back with their famous trick.

The problem of dining satisfactorily while "the family is away" is no problem to those who try the Rathskeller or Venetian Room. A la Carte in the first; either a la Carte or table d'Hote in the latter.

RATHSKELLER

"OPEN UNTIL MIDNIGHT"

Paragon Park.

There are plenty of new features to interest visitors at Paragon Park this season, and during the few days that the park has been open crowds have been pouring through the gates in most encouraging fashion. Not the least attractive of the new features this year is the lagoon, now the handsomest home of a diving seals. To take care of the increasing demands upon it Manager Dodge has extended the seating capacity of the Palm Garden to 2,000.

Globe Theatre.

A new program of remarkable quality was presented at the Globe Theatre yesterday, headed by the Meade & Frew trio of athletic wonders, whose work was not only novel but inspiring. Kitzel and West, talking comedians, kept things moving, and with several other features and a new lot of motion pictures the entertainment was made particularly inviting.

Orpheum Theatre.

Always on the lookout for novelties the management of the Orpheum Theatre put one across yesterday with "The Gibson Girls," a troupe of musical comedy entertainers who kept things moving lively and musically. The pretty girls in the company made the hit of the bill. There were a half dozen other features, including new motion pictures.

Norumbega Park.

Besides its many other splendid attractions the open air theatre at Norumbega Park drew considerable attention from visitors yesterday, for one of the best of vaudeville programs was offered at two performances. The bill was headed by the Minute Four, a company of comedy folk that left no regrets. Other numbers on the bill were equally attractive.

Bass Point.

With the season at Bass Point and Nahant in full operation it is only natural that the hotels and steamboat line should be doing capacity business. The sail down the harbor makes a delightful beginning to a day at Bass Point, where the shore dinners are among the best and most favorably known on the coast.

Provincetown Trips.

With pleasant weather approaching there will be a rush to the steamer Dorothy Bradford, which makes daily trips to Provincetown. The new boat is equipped with every device for the comfort of the passengers, and the sail across the bay is one of the most beautiful out of Boston.

Austin & Stone's.

The gigantic cow continues as the eye-opening attraction at Austin & Stone's Museum. Besides this there are many other features, including a programme in the theatre.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

The Antil Trio was one of the engaging features of the new programme at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday. There were several other acts.

Scenic Temple.

The new programme at the Scenic Temple yesterday was made up of vaudeville novelties and attractive motion pictures, all of which were new to Boston audiences.

Hub Theatre.

The Maid of Mystery, one of the most astonishing acts in vaudeville, was the main feature of the new bill at the Hub Theatre yesterday. There were other attractions.

Plays That Remain.

What will doubtless prove another prosperous week for "Little Lord Fauntleroy" was begun at the Castle Square Theatre yesterday. Miss Henriette Wethersel, who plays the title role, is making herself fully as popular as the boy was the delicious Petite in "The Kid of the Bridge."

The second week of "The Chorus Lady" drew big audiences to the Majestic Theatre yesterday. Miss Eleanor Gordon as Patricia O'Brien and Mrs. George A. Hibbard as Sophie Simpson were particularly agreeable in their work.

"The Red Rose" began its final week at the Tremont Theatre last evening. It has many popular features.

Another lease of life was given "Dr. Deluxe" at the Colonial Theatre last evening. The "Harem Scarum" number catches the crowd.

Next Week's Plays.

"The Lottery Man," one of the jolliest and most successful farces of the past season, will be Mr. Craig's offering at the Castle Square Theatre next week.

Lindsay Morison's company will turn from the straight drama to musical comedy at the Majestic Theatre next week, when "The Man Who Owns Broadway" will be given.

MAINE ORDERED OUT.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 18.—The Navy Department has issued a preparatory order directing that the U. S. S. Maine be commissioned on June 15 and sail from the navy yard not later than June 30.

JOHN E. FRENCH, FOR WHOM POLICE ARE SEARCHING

JOHN E. FRENCH.

Mrs. John E. French of No. 34 Havre street, East Boston, has asked the police to help her find her husband, who disappeared from his home on the evening of May 13. He had come from Gridley's cartridge shop, where he was employed, and played with the baby for some time. When he left the house it was to go to the market for the Sunday groceries. His wife has not seen him since and has no idea of his whereabouts. She said to-day:

"My husband's going away has left me in a terrible situation. My home is in Norfolk, Va., and I am entirely alone and almost without friends here.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

BEAR POOL IN STEEL STOCKS

NEW YORK, June 13.—Renewed pressure marked the opening of the stock market to-day, heavy selling in United States Steel and some of the railroads. Traders believed that a new bear pool had been formed to hammer down the list.

St. Paul sold off 1¼ in the first trading, while Northern Pacific yielded a point. Steel was off ⅛ in the initial prices. The copper stocks acted independently of the general list, scoring gains. Amalgamated was up ¼ and American Smelting up ⅝. This strength, it was declared in some quarters, was due to a renewal of merger talk.

Heaviness prevailed in the first fifteen minutes of trading and the line many issues were off almost ½ point from the opening prices. Material fractional losses were scored in Reading, Erie, Union and Southern Pacific. This heaviness gradually extended to the copper shares, causing them to move downward.

The following other losses were noted: Canadian Pacific ⅝, Atchison ⅝, and Southern Pacific ½. The curb market opened steady with American Tobacco of new (old) at last night's close, selling at 408 bid. Americans in the London market were firm.

FIVE YEARS' JOB TO GET ACQUAINTED WITH 'FRIEND WIFE'

NEW YORK, June 13.—June brides and bridegrooms take heed. It takes about five years for a married couple to get well enough acquainted to live together in harmony, according to the Supreme Court, speaking through Justice Ford, who said: "In my opinion it takes about five years for the ordinary couple to become accustomed and adapted to each other before they can live together congenially. In other words, it takes that time for them to overlook each other's faults."

CHOLERA CASE HOLDS UP LINER

NEW YORK, June 13.—A cholera ship arrived at quarantine to-day and was rigidly inspected by the federal health authorities. The vessel is the North German Lloyd liner Berlin, from Genoa and Naples. Russo Biaggio, a steerage passenger, died of cholera on June 7, after thirty hours' sickness.

Plans were made to remove the 836 other steerage passengers to Hoffman Island. It was said that the cabin passengers would be detained on board possibly all day while the health authorities continued their preventive measure.

There were 150 first class and 200 second cabin passengers on board. Among the passengers was Dr. Sterai Ippolito, an Italian royal health commissioner. He agreed with the ship's surgeon that Biaggio had unquestionably died of cholera. Biaggio came from Calabria and embarked at Naples.

Another of the passengers is Harrison S. Morris, commissioner-general of the United States to the Rome exposition.

OFFICERS CAMP IN RAIN.

NIANTIC, Ct., June 13.—The commissioned officers of the Connecticut National Guard who reached here for the week's camp of instruction, the first of the kind in the history of the service, found rain pouring down. Tents were pitched. Two captains and three lieutenants of the regular army are in charge of the instruction.

URGES CHURCH TO AID REFORMS

Rev. Dr. John H. Melish, D. D., rector of St. Ann's Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, advocated to-day in Tremont Temple before the conference of Charities and Corrections a new type of minister.

He said in part:

"If the church is to go forward into this new era of 'get together' and do in the future anything like what it has done in the past, it must adapt itself to the new situation. The simple organization with the preacher or priest, the parson or parson adapted to the simple life of the village or small community is not adapted to the complicated and highly organized life of our modern cities.

"There is something pathetic in the way rent parishes search the world over for men to fill their pulpits, going on with the same methods and never realizing that the world has changed. We need to-day a new diaconate, not a new apostate; a body of men and women trained and equipped to organize the parish for social service and to lead in this service.

"The church should be furnishing trained workers to the charities and public committees of the community and not wait to have those workers drafted from the churches."

"What our age needs is unity in the service of the community on the part of all the forces working for the community. The church should not compete with other organizations, forming agencies of its own to do similar service, it should co-operate with other organizations; it should recognize love, charity, service wherever they are found—in a charitable society, labor union, or a socialistic propagandas evidence of the Spirit."

"That very little is known in the United States about industrial diseases is partly due to the fact that many of the most unhealthful trades employ newly arrived immigrants who are unknown to the community in which they live," said Dr. Alice Hamilton of Philadelphia in her address to-day.

Dr. Hamilton cited the exhaustive study of the match industry made last year as the only scientific inquiry of this kind to have been completed in this country. Continuing, she said: "There is a widespread but erroneous belief that our country suffers less from trade diseases than the older countries. The Illinois Commission on Occupational Diseases, which made an investigation last year into the poisonous trades, found that there is much lead poisoning in Illinois, more than in the same trades in England and in Europe.

It found that the employers are usually not aware of sickness among their people and that the workmen are often quite ignorant of the dangers to which they are exposed. The commission had great difficulty in obtaining information. Physicians, hospital officials, insurance companies, and employers were for the most part unable to give accurate detailed information."

No More FalseTeeth
Dr. Estabrooks can, at popular prices, replace the lost tooth by the only one like which known, a new system of dentistry without the use of an odd-size plate or old-style crowns or bridges. Don't let any dentist extract your teeth or make you a set of false teeth—see Dr. Estabrooks first.

NO PAIN
Dr. Estabrook's POPULAR Price DENTISTRY
ANCHOR DENTURE PLATE PATENTED
ROOF

If you have no solid teeth or roots left, the Anchor Denture Plate is the best for you. Unlike the ordinary set of teeth, Dr. Estabrooks' Anchor Denture Plate is roofless. This construction allows you to talk and taste perfectly. It is cool, comfortable, clean and fits better. It never drops, shifts or displaces to cause any embarrassment.

PAINLESS EXTRACTION FREE
No charge for examination or advice.
People who have sensitive teeth to be filled or extracted can come here with absolute confidence that they will Not Be Hurt in the slightest.
Set Teeth, $5 and $10. Crowns $3. Fillings 50c.

80 AND 85 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JUNE 13, 1911

Some Thoughts Suggested by Present Senate Conditions

The wrangle over reciprocity will not be the wrangle of a day, a week, a month. If the country be possessed of the commonest wisdom of events it will swing a hammock in some shadiest nook and make itself as comfortable as it may.

What signs and signal smokes are shown from the hilltops of affairs indicate for Congress an all-Summer session. The other day that far from favorite son of Texas, Mr. Bailey, engaged himself in certain Senate calisthenics of time-setting sort which, had they been successful, would have fixed upon a day in late July for the transaction of one piece of Senate business, and a day in still later August for the transaction of another. To be sure, the action of Mr. Bailey was intended as a bluff and meant to frighten fellow Senators just then mopping free their fretted domes of thought from the perspirations of June. That attitude of bluff on the part of Mr. Bailey was to have been expected. An empty terrorist, a facemaker, his whole career has been one of bluff and based on bluff. Mr. Bailey to succeed must be feared. With folk who have no fear of him—and their name, like their number, is legion—Mr. Bailey is powerless.

The military education of the old-time Chinaman favored the theory that hideous masks and fearful noises and a dragon-like front were a best method of battle. You were to fill the foe with terror, frighten him from the field. By the same token, all whom you failed to frighten you were to fly from. Thus taught the ancient Chinese.

If there be aught in the old Greek's claim concerning the transmigration of souls, Mr. Bailey, in some former life not too remote, flourished as a Chinaman. To-day he is the Chinaman of the Senate, with all of the old-day Chinese war methods and war instincts. He first tries to frighten, and, failing to frighten, he flies.

However, one must not allow one's self to be deflected by the thing of no consequence or drawn aside upon the trail of the unimportant Mr. Bailey. The thought most worth while is that when Mr. Bailey by his action implied that the Senate would be in session during July and August his brow-mopping fellows were in no degree moved. Their manner was the manner of ones who had anticipated a session which would drag through July and August, and even September and October, and were wearily resigned thereunto. It wasn't what Mr. Bailey did; it was the way the Senate received it that was impressive.

This Senate manner of sullen, dogged resignation—or, if you prefer it, determination—toward an all-Summer session provokes a question. Why should Senators blister and swelter—why should they irritate American feeling by delaying reciprocity? There is no doubt of the finale. The measure will pass. It will pass, too, without the hamstringing of any Root amendment, and be sent to the President as the President sent it to Congress.

Noses have been counted, a muster has been made. There are twenty-three Republicans and thirty-five Democrats who will vote for reciprocity. There are twenty-five Republicans and three Democrats who will vote against reciprocity. The roll call will show fifty-eight for, twenty-eight against, with two Republicans and two Democrats walking the back fence.

These latter four uncertain ones seem unable to decide whether they will get down in the alley with the Baileys and the Bristows or down in the back yard with the Bournes and the Bacons. Should the entire quartette, however, flop down with the back alley foes of reciprocity, reciprocity will none the less triumph by an unanswerable majority.

Why, then, is there a Senate delay? What interest, personal or public, is to be gainer thereby? The people want reciprocity, have always wanted reciprocity. If the Cumminses and the La Follettes, the Baileys and the Thorntons didn't know this in the beginning they are aware of it now. Their letters from home have told them. The returns from Council Bluffs have told them. Why, then, would it not be wiser politics, even in the narrow sense of party, to let the public have its way and will and pass the bill?

In the teeth of the inevitable, in the face of what the people want, however, the Senate—the Republican Senate—is conniving for delay. The threatened trusts—Meat, Lumber, Paper and the rest—would put off a reciprocity blow as long as they can. Reciprocity in November is better, they think, than reciprocity in June, since in their bandit cases it grants them four more months in which to loot mankind.

Are the La Follettes and the Cumminses working for the black god of these trust robbers? They are staving off reciprocity—reciprocity, sure of final adoption—and their action is as so much evil water on the trusts' iniquitous wheel.

Every Senator who stands in the way of immediate action is but giving aid and comfort to the enemy. There isn't a Senator who doesn't know and isn't convinced that the people want reciprocity. Every one who assists in delaying a vote acts in open-eyed defiance of the popular desire.

There should be argument in this for urging the election of Senators by the people. Corporations hang together like bats in a steeple. The immediate interest of any one of them becomes the remote interest of all. There are in this land of the free (?) 26,200 corporations. Their aggregate stock equals $51,000,000,000. Their aggregate bond issues count up to $31,000,000,000. The net income (these are Government figures) on the stock and bond issues of those 26,200 corporations is $3,400,000,000. Also the whole wealth of the country is estimated at but $120,000,000,000.

Who is master of the Senate—the country or the corporations? The corporations, not the country, control the State Legislatures. The Senators are born, not of a popular, but a legislative vote. Are our Senators—our Cumminses and our La Follettes—because of this, working for the corporations rather than the country? Then the sooner the people elect their Senators the better for the country.

No one would say or suppose that the La Follettes and the Cumminses would go consciously courting the robber favor of the trusts, but the best of us, when nose-led by an ambition, sometimes are found in unconscious ambush to waylay our own honesty. More than one of us, without knowing it, has sold out to himself.

Let it be stated again, the Senate situation on reciprocity, with its threatened four months of useless delay—during which the bandit trusts which reciprocity threatens will continue to hold up and rob the public—makes in support of the election of Senators by the people. Their selection by the Legislatures means their selection by the corporations, as the present condition of Senate affairs makes more or less plain.

Will the people submit? As one considers the delay-makers of the Senate and the popular lack of resentment of that delay, one is moved to say with Isaiah: "The ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib; but Israel doth not know, my people do not consider."

COME WITH ME! SOMETHING TERRIBLE HAS HAPPENED!
GIVE US THE COMPLETE DETAILS AS WE GO ALONG!
THAT DOG HAS BEEN GUARDING THAT COAT FOR THREE DAYS! I FEAR THE OWNER HAS MET WITH FOUL PLAY!
YOU CALL HIM, WATSO—I'LL PICK UP THE COAT!
GR-R-R!
COME, FIDO!
AH, HERE'S A CLUE! THE COAT WAS MADE BY SHRIMPO THE TAILOR!
GR-R-R!
YOU MADE THIS COAT, I BELIEVE! WILL YOU PLEASE GIVE ME THE OWNER'S ADDRESS?
GR-R-R!
THAT'S MY MAKE—I'LL LOOK THE ADDRESS UP IN THE BOOK!
WHAT'S THE USE OF GOING TO THE HOUSE?—LET'S GO BACK AND SEARCH FOR THE BODY!
WATSO, YOU'RE LABORING UNDER A MISAPPREHENSION! THERE HAS BEEN NO CRIME.
MR. FORGETTO, THREE DAYS AGO YOU LEFT THIS COAT IN THE WOODS, WITH THE DOG GUARDING IT—
HAT—FORGETTO!
OH, NOW I REMEMBER WHY SO I DID! I WAS WONDERING WHAT HAD BECOME OF THEM!

Story Time

By WEX JONES

THERE'S a fat little girl that I cuddle on my knee,
A little fat girl who is just over three.
All day long she is full of stunts and tricks,
But she cuddles on my knee about half-past six.

All through the day she's a quicksilver imp,
Bouncing round the house as active as a shrimp,
But some time after six o'clock this fat young miss of three
Gives up her romps and ructions to cuddle on my knee.

She says she isn't sleepy—wouldn't THINK of going to bed—
But in the crook of my elbow she rests her golden head.
And "Tell me 'tory," whispers, as the clock slowly ticks,
Ticks-ticks, ticks-ticks—"It's story time about half-past six."

So I yarn to the fat little audience that I cuddle upon my knee,
A yarn that is bursting with interest to any one just over three;
A yarn of dollies and pussy-cats (with a realistic "mew"),
Of dogs (here a bark) and of ducks ("quack, quack") and of trains ("choo-choo, choo-choo").

It's a yarn in which no one's unhappy and none is of villainous bent,
For the hearer knows nothing of sorrow—wouldn't know what villainy meant—
But I work the unfortunate pussy into a terrible fix,
Where she has to remain, for the house falls asleep very soon after half-past six.

And then I think of the future, when no power of mine can keep Sorrow and hurt from the stories of the little girl asleep,
And half wish the dear little lady could always be just over three,
Listening to sleepy stories as I cuddle her on my knee.

The Woman Who Tries to Elevate a Husband

What Men Have Suffered from "Superior Wives" Would Make a Second Book of Martyrs. They Take the Same Joy in "Elevating" a Husband That the Indians Took in Scalping a Victim.

By DOROTHY DIX

A SCHOOLMA'AM who knows more about the differential calculus than she does about men became engaged to marry a youth who was strong on virtues but short on culture.

No sooner, however, did the lady have the ring on her finger than she assumed the role of teacher and began to tutor the poor man for all he was worth. She corrected his grammar. She revised his table manners. She edited his opinions. She showed him the way he should walk and talk and rise up and sit down.

In short, she became one perpetual incarnate "don't" to him, and, after standing it as long as he could, the man broke off the engagement and refused to commit himself to a lifetime of petty nagging by marrying her.

The schoolma'am calls the man all sorts of horrid names and is suing him for breach of promise, claiming she was strictly within her rights in all she did, as she was just trying to educate her prospective husband up to her level, so that he would be a suitable companion for her.

It's easy guessing what a jury will do with a case like that; but, in any event, the man has shown his wisdom in sidestepping a marriage that would be nothing but a course in correction.

Better were it for him to be stripped of the last cent he has in the world to pay for damages to the lady's feelings than to be robbed of all independence and freedom of action by having her pedagogic eye always upon him.

For there is no other torture, short of being skinned alive, that is so painful as being "elevated" to somebody else's level. It is a dark and bloody process that takes no account of the victim's predilections, of his crushed vanity, his mutilated self-esteem, his amputated tastes and habits.

Nor does the ruthless hand of the elevator stop at the protests, at the cries and groans and struggles of the groundling who is being made over to fit the higher life. He, or she, for the torturer is generally a woman, goes serenely on her way, sublimely convinced that the more an individual objects to being changed the more that benighted soul needs it.

What men have suffered from superior wives would make a second book of martyrs, and certainly any one who gets an inkling before marriage that he is likely to be the subject of his spouse's reforms shows only common presence of mind in turning tail and fleeing from the altar. It is better to be called a coward than to be called down for everything you do and don't do.

It is a part of the feminine psychology that no one has ever been able to explain, and women themselves do not understand, that women deliberately marry men with the set purpose of cutting them over according to their own little perforated paper patterns. They have the same joy in "elevating" a husband that the red Indians took in scalping their enemies. And they have just as little regard for his feelings in doing it.

Men are much more considerate about criticising their wives than women are about correcting their husbands' mistakes—at least in public. If a man marries an ignorant woman who murders the King's English he generally lets her go her devastating way without comment. Apparently he doesn't notice her mistakes; but a woman, under such circumstances, will call everybody's attention to her husband's errors, and humiliate him by going behind him and picking up the dismembered parts of speech in a basket.

If a woman has been brought up to eat pie with a knife, her husband lets her do so in peace; but if a man doesn't know which is which in the forks at dinner, his wife imparts the information to him in stage whispers, or by cryptic signs that make him look like a boor.

One can sympathize with the feelings of a wife who puts great stress on elegance of manner if her husband is a rough diamond, or with the woman who is cultured if her husband is illiterate; but the trouble is these women should have married in their own class and the type of men who were congenial to begin with. Having married the other sort of man, they have no right to harass him, trying to make him over according to their tastes.

He has a perfect right to go his own untrammelled way as to grammar and pronunciation and table etiquette if they married on that platform. After all, there are more important things, and the man who splits his purse with his wife should be permitted to split his infinitives undisturbed.

The main thing for wives to remember in this connection is that no affection ever survives constant criticism. The women that men love are the women who admire them, who flatter them, who look up to them. Therefore, the wife who points out to her husband his mistakes and proves to him how much better informed and better educated and generally wiser she is than he is had as well kiss Cupid goodby.

For he and hubby have their dress-suit cases packed and are on their way to some woman who has book knowledge and more information about MAN.

Robert Treat Paine Praises American's Stand on State Legislation

Editor AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I want to express my appreciation of your stirring editorial on the assassination of the Public Opinion Bill. One has to look to the AMERICAN for the editorial emphasis by a Boston newspaper of the fundamental principles affecting the community.

I have not seen all your recent numbers, and may have missed other articles relating to this question, but would it not be well to refer to and direct attention towards the half dozen wavering Senators who ought to be with and are often drawn off to be against the people's cause? This may be especially important in view of the approaching struggle to defeat the new Initiative and Referendum Bill.

As to this latter, I would ask your favorable consideration of the new draft proposed to the constitutional amendment sub-committee, whereby the necessity for a petition prior to legislative action or inaction is obviated, and thus the necessity for using the rather unknown and much disliked word "Initiative" is obviated.

As presented to the committee everything goes to the people for final decision, but the petition can be circulated after the "initiative" petition is presented instead of prior thereto. This will shorten the time involved and render easier the securing of signatures during the attention attracted to the measure being debated and killed in the legislature.

Very truly yours,
ROBERT T. PAINE.
